

A GREENER WAY TO GO - NATURAL BURIAL CEMETERY

From preparing bodies to burying them in natural settings, the green burial movement is attempting to make death more environmentally friendly and, in some ways, closer to the way it was in the past. A comparison:

CONVENTIONAL BURIAL

Burials use formaldehyde embalming and long-lasting caskets and burial vaults. Burial density 1,200 per acre.

A conventional grave site, often landscaped and well-maintained, features a large headstone made of granite or flat bronze. Fertilizer and pesticides may be used on the grass.

Below ground, a casket made of steel, finished wood and copper rests inside a concrete vault capped by a thick concrete lid.

NATURAL BURIAL

The natural, or green, burial method uses no embalming fluid or a formula that is not formaldehyde-based. Burial density limited to 500 per acre.

A green grave site is in a natural setting.

If there's a headstone, it's a rock or a piece of rough-cut limestone that's flat on one side to identify the deceased. Some methods use GPS coordinates to spot a grave's location.

Caskets are made of bamboo, wicker or other unfinished, fast-growing and renewable timber. Shrouds are also an option in which to wrap the body for burial.

Straw or leaves line the grave to add microbes that help with decomposition.

Deep Their Grave

Sir John Lubbock

Deep Their Grave:

Romano-British Settlement and Cemeteries at Mucking Sam Lucy, Christopher Evans, 2016-11-30 Excavations at Mucking Essex between 1965 and 1978 revealed extensive evidence for a multiphase rural Romano British settlement perhaps an estate center and five associated cemetery areas 170 burials with different burial areas reserved for different groups within the settlement The settlement demonstrated clear continuity from the preceding Iron Age occupation with unbroken sequences of artefacts and enclosures through the first century AD followed by rapid and extensive remodeling which included the laying out a Central Enclosure and an organized water supply with wells accompanied by the start of large scale pottery production After the mid second century AD the Central Enclosure was largely abandoned and settlement shifted its focus more to the Southern Enclosure system with a gradual decline though the 3rd and 4th centuries although continued burial pottery and artefactual deposition indicate that a form of settlement continued possibly with some low level pottery production Some of the latest Roman pottery was strongly associated with the earliest Anglo Saxon style pottery suggesting the existence of a terminal Roman settlement phase that essentially involved an Anglo Saxon community Given recent revisions of the chronology for the early Anglo Saxon period this casts an intriguing light on the transition with radical implications for understandings of this period Each of the cemetery areas was in use for a considerable length of time Taken as a whole Mucking was very much a component place complex it was its respective parts that fostered its many cemeteries whose diverse rites reflect the variability and roles of the settlement s evidently varied inhabitants
