Creative Conservation P.J. Olney, G. Mace, A. Feistner, 2012-12-06 Past progress and future challenges R J Wheeler Royal Zoological Society of Scotland Edinburgh UK In the past two decades much has been achieved in the sphere of breeding endangered species and we should be pleased that our co operative efforts have already borne so much fruit However on balance and despite the best efforts of conservationists the position of wildlife in the wild places where they are best conserved has become worse often dramatically worse Before returning to the United Kingdom in 1972 I was in Uganda for 16 years most of which time was spent as Chief Warden of Murchison Falls National Park Our main problem was that an over population of large mammals was having a devastating impact on the habitat Devastation was being wrought on woodland areas by the arrival of large numbers of elephants into the sanctuary of the Park following changes in land use in the areas outside the Park These changes were in response to the requirements of an ever expanding human population The Neglected Ape Biruté M.F. Galdikas, R.D. Nadler, N. Rosen, Lori K. Sheeran, 2013-11-11 The orangutan is the most highly endangered species of great ape Orangutans are threatened by deforestation poaching the illegal pet trade and the isolation and fragmentation of dwindling wild populations Their conservation is impeded by certain aspects of their ecology e.g. a rain forest habitat and certain features of their life history e.g. an eight to twelve year interbirth interval Added to the U S Endangered Species List in 1970 the orangutan is now clearly on the road to extinction The number of wild orangutans in Borneo and Sumatra is currently estimated to have decreased to between 12 300 and 20 571 individuals Only 2% of original orangutan habitat is protected and some of these areas are now being destroyed Clearly attention to ecology demography censusing rehabilitation and conservation is essential if the orangutan is to survive in the wild beyond the next century The protection of orangutans is a complex multifaceted problem involving such pressing issues as human poverty overpopulation and the economic development of Southeast Asia Although the orangutan has been placed in Appendix I of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES more orangutans were sold illegally in Taiwan between 1990 and 1993 than are housed in all the world's zoos In the past scientific and public attention has centered on the African apes For this reason the sole Asian great ape the orangutan has been called the neglected ape Extinction Studies Deborah Bird Rose, Thom van Dooren, Matthew Chrulew, 2017-05-02 Extinction Studies focuses on the entangled ecological and social dimensions of extinction exploring the ways in which extinction catastrophically interrupts life giving processes of time death and generations The volume opens up important philosophical questions about our place in and obligations to a more than human world Drawing on fieldwork philosophy literature history and a range of other perspectives each of the chapters in this book tells a unique extinction story that explores what extinction is what it means why it matters and to whom Simulation of Captive-wild Interactions and Implications for the Management of Endangered Species Karen Gay Cronquist Jones, 1997 Encyclopedia of the World's Zoos Catharine E.
