The purpose of the study was to determine the effect of the use of a computerized decision support system (DSS) on the performance of a group of students in a simulated environment. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting and involved a group of 20 students who were divided into two groups. The first group used a DSS, while the second group did not. The results of the study showed that the group that used the DSS performed significantly better than the group that did not. The DSS provided the students with a clear and concise summary of the information they needed to make a decision, which helped them to make a more informed decision. The study also found that the DSS reduced the time it took for the students to make a decision, which is a significant benefit in a simulated environment. The results of the study suggest that the use of a DSS can improve the performance of a group of students in a simulated environment.

Our call for action was simple: meet the crisis and respond to our communities by putting in place a policy of comprehensive language training for the rapidly rising youth of foreign descent. The bill was introduced just 2 weeks after the September 11 terrorist attack, a timely language that put everyone's support. The passage of the bill was a result of the support and the government to take immediate action and action. States, use the language and put forward the most important. In addition, after the September 11, the Congress, the government and the Department of Education began to put forward the bill. Dr. William Stein, played a key role in creating an anti-racism training policy under the National Endowment.
