By Far Euphrates D. Alcock, 2019-09-25 Reproduction of the original By Far Euphrates by D Alcock By Far Euphrates (Large Print) Deborah Alcock, 2022-01-07 By Far Euphrates by Deborah Alcock By Far Euphrates Deborah Alcock, 2019-02-05 By Far Euphrates a tale of Armenia in the 19th Century is particularly pertinent in 2015 as we remember the 100th Anniversary of the Armenian Genocide The history of Armenia is a complex one to untangle geographically and politically This story is set near the Euphrates close to what is now the Turkey Syria border and relates the details of the Hamidian Massacres in 1894 1896 which preceded the more well known Genocide in 1915 Miss Alcock worked to a tight schedule and wrote the book in only 5 weeks It was said that the atrocities her friend spoke of had such an emotional impact on her that she was never quite the same again Alcock writes with her usual depth and detail but perhaps her direct emotional involvement is what makes this book particularly powerful and gripping The persecution of Armenian Christians in the late 1800s was truly awful indiscriminate killing of men and boys women and children saved alive to be subjected to worse horrors In a helpful appendix Alcock explains which characters were real and which were fictional She also makes it clear that the atrocities described in the book left much detail out she felt it impossible to depict the worst features of the horrible crimes committed Tragically some of the events described seem sadly and horribly familiar in these current times Christians are being persecuted in 139 nations around the world The news that feeds through to our western society is often biased and secular neither recognising nor understanding the religious elements often involved in the incidents reported Lorna By Far Euphrates Deborah Alcock, 2017-12-24 Excerpt from By Far Euphrates A Tale Every instance of faith or heroism given in these pages is not only true in itself but typical of a hundred others The tale is told however feebly and inadequately to strengthen our own faith and quicken our own love It is told also to stir our own hearts to help and save the remnant that is left The past is past and we cannot change it now but we can still save from death or from fates worse than death the children of Christian parents who are helpless and desolate orphans because their parents were Christians and true to the Faith they professed and the Name they loved About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works By Far Euphrates Deborah Alcock, 2022-05-17 The book By Far Euphrates A Tale has been considered important throughout the human history and so that this work is never forgotten we have made efforts in its preservation by republishing this book in a modern format for present and future generations This whole book has been reformatted retyped and designed These books are not made of

Deborah Alcock,2016-03 Set in the late 1800 s this story could very well be torn from today s headlines From childhood a young Englishman watches as Christian Armenians are persecuted by Muslims and his attempts to help them The Far Euphrates Aryeh Lev Stollman,1998 A Jewish boy s coming of age in the shadow of the Holocaust Alexander 16 of Windsor Ontario is tormented by stories of death camps recounted by his family and desperately tries to find meaning By FAR EUPHRATES, New Edition Deborah Alcock,2016-02-04 The Eastern sun was near its setting Everywhere beneath its beams stretched out a vast dreary campaign pale yellowish brown with low rolling hills bare of vegetation There was scarcely anything upon which the eye of man could rest with interest or satisfaction except one little clump of plane trees beside which a party of travellers had spread their tents They had spent the day in repose for they intended to spend the night in travelling since although summer was past and autumn had come the heat was still great The tent in the centre of the little encampment was occupied by an Englishman and his son to whom all the rest were but guides or servants or guards The Syrians the Arabs and the Turkish zaptiehs who filled these offices were resting from their labours having tethered their horses under the trees It was about time for them to be stirring now to attend to the animals to make the coffee and to do other needful things in preparation for the journey But they were used to wait for a signal from their master for the time being Mr Grayson or Grayson Effendi as they generally called him Pending this they saw no reason to shorten their repose though a few of them sat up yawned and began to take out their tobacco pouches and to employ themselves in making cigarettes Presently from the Effendi s own tent a slight boyish form emerged and trod softly through the rest Hohannes Effendi so the Turks and Arabs called him as a kind of working equivalent for Master John was a bright fair faced blue eyed English lad in his sixteenth year He was dressed in a well worn suit of white drill and his head protected by a kind of helmet with flaps to cover the cheeks and neck since the glare reflected from the ground was almost as trying as the scorching heat above Once beyond the encampment he quickened his pace and fast and straight as an arrow flies dashed on over the little hills due eastwards For there the Arabs had told him a bow shot off two stones throw the length a man might ride while he said his La ilaha ill Allah ran the great river Waking some two hours before from the profound sleep of boyhood he had not been able to close his eyes again for the longing that came over him to look upon it For this was that ancient river last of the mystic Four that watered the flowers of Eden witness of ruined civilizations survivor of dead empires the old historic Euphrates Not that all this was present to the mind of young John Grayson but he had caught from his father whose constant companion he was a reflected interest in places where things happened which was transfigured by the glamour of a young imagination On and on he went for the wide featureless monotonous landscape deceived his eye and the river was really much farther than he thought He got amongst tall reeds which sometimes hindered his view though often he could see over them well enough if there had been anything to see except more reeds mixed with a little rank grass more low hills and over all a cloudless purple sky The one point of relief was the dark spot in the distance that meant as he knew the trees from which he had started He thought two or three times of turning back not from weariness and certainly not from fear except the fear that his father might wonder what had become of him But being a young Englishman he did not choose to be beaten and so he went on
