

A large, green, textured sculpture of a person, possibly an Inuit, with large, white, claw-like hands. The sculpture is set against a dark, textured background. The person's face is human-like, with a serious expression. The texture of the sculpture is rough and fibrous, resembling fur or a specific material. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the contours of the figure.

Inuit Art Richard C. Crandall, 2000 Inuit sometimes referred to as Eskimo art is the primary art form of Canada and has a large international following particularly in the United States Japan and Germany Despite its popularity the complete history of Inuit art has never been presented This is the first chronological synthesis of Inuit art following its development from prehistory through early American and European exploration to the recognition of Inuit art as a commercial possibility and up to the present There is a particular emphasis on contemporary art and artists and the years 1950 through 1997 are each given separate detailed treatment in regard to important shows and events This history is appropriate both for the beginning admirer of Inuit art and for those already well immersed in it

An Annotated Bibliography of Inuit Art Richard C. Crandall, Susan M. Crandall, 2015-07-25 Archaeological digs have turned up sculptures in Inuit lands that are thousands of years old but Inuit art as it is known today only dates back to the beginning of the 1900s Early art was traditionally produced from soft materials such as whalebone and tools and objects were also fashioned out of stone bone and ivory because these materials were readily available The Inuit people are known not just for their sculpture but for their graphic art as well the most prominent forms being lithographs and stonecuts This work affords easy access to information to those interested in any type of Inuit art There are annotated entries on over 3 761 articles books catalogues government documents and other publications

St. James Guide to Native North American Artists Roger Matuz, 1998 Profiling 400 prominent artists of the 20th century each entry in this reference includes a biographical profile lists of exhibitions public galleries and museums a bibliography of books and articles by and about the entrant and presents a critical perspective on the artist s work
