Crafting Selves Dorinne K. Kondo, 2009-02-20 The ethnography of Japan is currently being reshaped by a new generation of Japanologists and the present work certainly deserves a place in this body of literature The combination of utility with beauty makes Kondo's book required reading for those with an interest not only in Japan but also in reflexive anthropology women's studies field methods the anthropology of work social psychology Asian Americans and even modern literature Paul H. Noguchi American Anthropologist Kondo's work is significant because she goes beyond disharmony insisting on complexity Kondo shows that inequalities are not simply oppressive they are meaningful ways to establish identities Nancy Rosenberger Journal of Asian Studies The Social Self in Zen and American Pragmatism Steve Odin, 1996-01-01 The thesis of this work is that in both modern Japanese philosophy and American pragmatism there has been a paradigm shift from a monological concept of self as an isolated I to a dialogical concept of the social self as an I-Thou relation including a communication model of self as individual-society interaction It is also shown for both traditions all aesthetic moral and religious values are a function of the social self arising through communicative interaction between the individual and society However at the same time this work critically examines major ideological conflicts arising between the social self theories of modern Japanese philosophy and American pragmatism with respect to such problems as individualism versus collectivism freedom versus determinism liberalism versus communitarianism and relativism versus objectivism

Making Stories, Making Selves Robin Ruth Linden, 1993 Ruth Linden's bold experimental book explores the interconnected processes of remembering storytelling and self-fashioning Juxtaposing autobiography and ethnography Linden begins this study by situating herself in the context of her assimilated Jewish family where the Holocaust was shrouded in silences Urged forward by these silences Linden a feminist and sociologist began to interview Jewish Holocaust survivors in 1983 As Linden interprets survivors' accounts of the death camps and the resistance she reveals complex ways in which selves are constructed through storytelling The stories that unfold are continuously fashioned and refashioned never stripped of context or frozen in time What emerges is an unexpectedly elegant montage in which interviewee interviewer and author are intertwined Linden's meetings with survivors and her encounters with their stories transformed her as a feminist a Jew and a social scientist Her analysis reveals the intimate connections between an ethnographer's lived experience and her interpretations of others Linden's reflections on the process of ethnography belie the rhetoric of positivism in the social sciences They will inspire other scholars to break free of research and writing practices in their own disciplines that efface the ineluctable bond between knower and known All readers will be challenged to reexamine the Holocaust in an intensely personal light and to reconsider the meanings of survival in our own time Cutting across the boundaries of ethnography and autobiography to create a new kind of text Making Stories, Making Selves offers a significant contribution to interpretive social science and the literature of the Holocaust Linden's original and courageous work is vital reading for Holocaust
