Anna Grasskamp, 2025-10-20 The reuse and recycling of materials that were made in China has a short history in the daily activities of private households worldwide but a long history in art, craft and design. Focusing on the practices of artists, craftspeople and designers and their re-evaluation of unwanted, pre-used and discarded materials, this volume presents new research on material culture from China, one of the world's leading waste-receiving and waste-producing countries in a global context. Through the lens of an ecocritical history of art, craft and design, it studies creative engagements with matter related to aspects of dis-connectivity, considering how the meanings and values attributed to objects and raw materials can change radically as they travel across historical and cultural divides. A captivating account of the cycles of use, waste and reinvention that animate modern and contemporary China. The authors capture the dexterity of artists and craftspeople who imagine, picture, signify, fashion and terraform the aesthetic dimension. With vivid detail, the chapters highlight the ingenuity of Chinese material culture in the complexity of its global circulation and planetary transformation. Re Made is a necessary volume for anyone seeking to inform their perspective of China's impact on today's political ecologies.
