Societal lockdowns and other intervening behavioural restrictions built significantly around social isolation used by governments to control the spread of COVID-19 disrupted the lives of most people. There were economic costs for many as workplaces closed down as well as severe stresses on friendships and romantic relationships, an increase in instances of abuse and domestic violence and concerns about people drinking too much alcohol or gambling too much as compensatory behaviours. Understanding which people were at risk and in what ways could teach important lessons for the future. Presenting a timely review of the most recent international research and evidence, author Barrie Gunter assesses the major collateral psychological side effects of the pandemic. Looking forward, Gunter also considers how new models might be developed that take into account not just the need to halt the spread of a new virus but also minimise collateral damage which could be every bit as severe in both the
