Causal Theories Of Mind:

Causal Theories of Mind Steven Davis, 2012-01-19 No detailed description available for Causal Theories of Mind

Causality, Interpretation, and the Mind William Child, 1996 William Child examines two central ideas in the philosophy of mind and argues that contrary to what many philosophers have thought an understanding of the mind can and should include both Causalism the idea that causality plays an essential role in our understanding of the mental and Interpretationism the idea that we can gain an understanding of belief and desire by considering the ascription of attitudes to people on the basis of what they say and do

Beyond Causal Theories of Mind Paul Robert Audi, 2007 Contemporary philosophy of mind is dominated by the broadly functionalist view that what is distinctive of mentality is a certain kind of causal structure Such functionalist theories are the keystone of contemporary physicalism I believe that causal theories are inadequate to account for mental phenomena but that existing objections to them while largely correct fail to address their most basic inadequacy the causal accounts of properties in which causal theories of mind are embedded I draw attention to a relation of determination that is stronger than causation That relation is grounding Grounding is what is picked out by the English phrase in virtue of in a specific range of uses I draw out the logic of the relation through consideration of examples and then show how it can be employed in formulating a criterion of identity for properties This provides a framework for approaching fundamental questions about the relation between mental and physical properties I argue that mental properties are neither identical to nor realized by physical properties and that physicalism is thus false The argument appeals to the special role the mind plays in determining certain normative phenomena and the inability of physical properties to play that role I close by defending antiphysicalism from objections concerning mental causation

Causality, Interpretation and the Mind T. William Child, 1994 Exploring the relation between interpretationism and causal theories in the philosophy of mind this text defends interpretationism as an approach to the propositional attitudes It also defends causal theories of action explanation and vision

Encyclopedia of the Mind Harold Pashler, 2013-01-14 It is hard to conceive of a topic of more broad and personal interest than the study of the mind In addition to its traditional investigation by the disciplines of psychology psychiatry and neuroscience the mind has also been a focus of study in the fields of philosophy economics anthropology linguistics computer science molecular biology education and literature In all these approaches there is an almost universal fascination with how the mind works and how it affects our lives and our behavior Studies of the mind and brain have crossed many exciting thresholds in recent years and the study of mind now represents a thoroughly cross disciplinary effort Researchers from a wide range of disciplines seek answers to such questions as What is mind How does it operate What is consciousness This encyclopedia brings together scholars from the entire range of mind related academic disciplines from across the arts and humanities social sciences life sciences and computer science and engineering to explore the multidimensional nature of the human mind

systematic investigation of a range of solutions offered today for the philosophical problem of mental causation The premises constituting the problem are analyzed before a survey is developed of the most popular theories on mental causation It is demonstrated in detail why most of these canonical solutions must be considered deficient In a third part the new compatibilist s approach to mental causation is explored which is characterized by assertion of a non identity but non distinctness principle The last part aims to offer an alternative solution to the problem On the basis of a certain set of counterfactual conditionals which are jointly taken to provide a definition of causal proportionality that improves the existing definitions it is shown that a specific and hitherto widely neglected version of causal overdeterminationism must be considered the most successful solution to the problem of mental causation     Mental Causation Jens Harbecke,2008 This work systematically investigates a range of solutions forthe philosophical problem of mental causation The premisesconstituting the problem are analyzed then a survey is developedof the most popular theories on mental causation Harbeckedemonstrates why most of these canonical solutions must beconsidered deficient In a third part the new compatibilistsapproach to mental causation is explored which is characterizedby assertion of a non identity but non distinctness principle The last part offers an alternative solution to the problem Onthe basis of a certain set of counterfactual conditionals which arejointly taken to provide a definition of causal proportionalitythat improves the existing definitions it is shown that a specific and hitherto widely neglected version of causal overdeterminationismmust be considered the most successful solution tothe problem     Why the Mind Has a Body Charles Augustus Strong,1903     The Mind John Brockman,2011-08-16 Who am I How is happiness achieved What is the key to memory How do babies become adults Is personality determined What function do emotions serve Are we hardwired to be moral The mind is a riddle that has vexed philosophers psychologists biologists and artists for thousands of years In this invaluable volume John Brockman editor and publisher of Edge gathers the world s most influential scientists and thinkers to present their deepest thoughts and cutting edge theories in short accessible essays about the essential aspects of human consciousness and the complex workings of the brain Contributors and topics include Steven Pinker on how the human brain works Martin Seligman on happiness and what it means to live a good life Philip Zimbardo on the impact of environment on personality V S Ramachandran on the question of self who you are Simon Baron Cohen on the innate differences between boys and girls George Lakoff on the role of the body and brain on different types of reasoning Alison Gopnik on why human children are the best learning machines in the universe Jonathan Haidt on the connection between emotions morality and religious belief     A Syllabus of Psychology Henry Heath Bawden,1902     American Journal of Theology ,1906 Vols 2 6 include Theological and Semitic literature for 1898 1901 a bibliographical supplement to the American journal of theology and the American journal of Semitic languages and literatures By W Muss Arnolt Separately paged     The Monist Paul Carus,1903 Vols 2 and 5 include appendices     Psychology, Or, The Science of Mind Oliver S. Separately paged CAUSAL RELATIONS BETWEEN MIND AND BODY: A NEW FORMULATION OF THE MIND-BODY PROBLEM. DAVID RANDALL LUCE, 1957 Mind, 1896 Mind George Edward Moore, 1899 A journal of philosophy covering epistemology metaphysics philosophy of language philosophy of logic and philosophy of mind The Intellectual Virtues and the Life of the Mind Jonathan L. Kvanvig, 1992 Mental Causation Thomas Kroedel, 2019-12-19 Our minds have physical effects This happens for instance when we move our bodies when we act How is this possible Thomas Kroedel defends an account of mental causation in terms of difference making if our minds had been different the physical world would have been different therefore the mind causes events in the physical world His account not only explains how the mind has physical effects at all but solves the exclusion problem the problem of how those effects can have both mental and physical causes It is also unprecedented in scope because it is available to dualists about the mind as well as physicalists drawing on traditional views of causation as well as on the latest developments in the field of causal modelling It will be of interest to a range of readers in philosophy of mind and philosophy of science This book is also available as Open Access

Theos, Anthropos, Christos Roy Abraham Varghese, 2000 Theos Anthropos Christos A Compendium of Modern Philosophical Theology is an anthology of 21 essays two thirds of them appearing for the first time by noted thinkers who rigorously deploy the tools of modern thought to re-examine and restate the central insights of classical philosophy In natural theology the contributors address the challenge of influential varieties of skepticism while developing a cogent and coherent framework of thought to defend the existence as well as the simplicity immutability goodness and infinity of God In philosophy of mind they counter modern materialisms with an extensive defense of the existence of a mental reality which is radically nonphysical In moral philosophy the contributors consider the contradictions of relativism and the application of rationally defensible norms to contemporary ethical debates The final section comprises a critique of syncretism in comparative religion and a phenomenological analysis of the New Testament's Jesus
