Liz Matthew, 2013-11-11 Services to older people with mental health problems have gone through radical change in recent years Legislation has had a profound effect by dictating how care to older people is delivered both within hospital and within the community The recent government agenda emphasizes cost effectiveness value for money and accountability This too is an important driving force in re-evaluating the service although not everyone would agree with many of the proposed strategies and there are clearly different views as to the appropriateness of many of the services One thing is certain however the move towards interdisciplinary working is here to stay Not all change has been led by legislation and many innovations have been founded in the day to day practices in the care of older people with mental health problems A service of course does not become integrated merely by imposing joint working on a number of professionally based disciplines and in many ways this may not be desirable At its worst it produces duplication where people from different backgrounds are all doing the same job This is not the intention of joint working instead it should attempt to improve the quality of service by a rich mix of skills and experience from a number of related disciplines Rethinking the Sociology of Ageing Paul

Higgs, Chris Gilleard, 2025-02-12 In this important book Paul Higgs and Chris Gilleard demonstrate how an invigorated sociology of later life is crucial for understanding the role of later life in 21st century societies Ageism and

Person-Centred Care Stephen Buetow, 2024-10-14 This thought provoking book exposes the values judgements and hierarchies that underlie ageism in care settings Destabilizing the assumption that biases like ageism are always bad Buetow suggests that ageism is normatively neutral and that truly person centred care requires situated acknowledgement of and responsiveness to its negative and positive aspects Buetow contends that respecting meaningful age differences between persons as moral agents puts ageism on the radar of care environments weakening barriers to engagement His analysis moves from concern for age friendliness to prudent ageism that enables person centred care to apply practical wisdom in everyday age sensitive judgement and decision making Challenging political correctness and advocating for justice rather than social justice Buetow discusses how prudent ageism may advantage some age groups over others in particular circumstances while providing a moral structure for managing real rather than socially constructed differences Looking at how age sensitive judgments combined with a person first approach can inform research policy and practice this book will interest students and researchers from fields like health and social care and disciplines such as sociology psychology politics and philosophy
