Cheaper And Better Homemade Alternatives To Storebought Goods:

Cheaper and Better Nancy Birnes, 2017-09-21 The recipes described in the following pages will show you how to make foods and household items that are both cheaper and better The concept of cheaper is obvious if you make every item in this book just one time you will save a total of 1 656 80 over the cost of those very same items purchased from the grocery store drugstore hardware store or garden center That s a lot of money but is it worth it to you In other words is it better For many people the simple fact that an item is cheaper means that it is better for them Everybody it seems can be ridiculously cheap about certain things They may save string or the tiniest slivers of soap perhaps while at the same time buy an extravagantly priced condiment or costly piece of computer equipment without blanching Therefore the wide range of items covered in the following chapters gives you plenty of leeway to experiment and indulge your cheapest tendencies while saving loads of money for private indulgences For some people a homemade item is better because all the ingredients that go into it are known familiar and safe Consider that the food and products you make yourself will not contain any additives to prolong their shelf life or spark up their appearance Nor will they contain excessive amounts of salt sugar or any ingredient a family member may not like or which might cause an allergic reaction It is becoming obvious that the less we stabilize chemically alter or dye the food we eat and the cosmetics we use the better off we will be both physically as well as economically Obviously you will save a great deal of money by packaging your food and household items yourself in simple wrappings or in reusable containers We pay a small fortune for the informative eye catching theft resistant and tamper proof containers that hold the items we buy and since some of the containers are costlier than their contents you will have the opportunity to use and reuse those containers you ve already purchased to hold your own creations from Cheaper Better There s even a measure of built in convenience when you make it yourself from scratch in the quantities you will need You can make and freeze a jumbo supply of tomato based sauce from ingredients you ve purchased in bulk at the end of the summer and then make fresh Mexican and Italian dinners all winter long by varying a few spices and side dishes You can make up shampoo and cleaning solutions in gallon size containers and eliminate constant and expensive trips to the store for these items You can even package individual servings of granola snacks frozen pancake batter or herbal teas so that breakfast can be simple and quick yet still inexpensive Of course all this takes a bit of planning and organization and that s what Cheaper Better is all about I ve spent over 20 years keeping a house clipping coupons learning gourmet and restaurant cooking techniques and especially learning how to save money Over those same years I ve tended to two husbands four kids five dogs two cats four apartments several houses one entire Brownie troop and assorted gerbils fish frogs plants gardens and cars In addition my parents and grandparents taught me many thrifty habits from the old country from the Depression and from the years during World War II when Victory gardening scrap collecting and rationing were the norm Cheaper & Better Nancy Birnes, 1987 How to make high quality products at home for a fraction of retail cost Cheaper and Better Nancy Birnes, 1988-06-01
