Comparing Environmental Risks J. Clarence Davies, 2018-09-27 The budgetary squeeze of the 1990s has made it obvious that the government cannot address every possible environmental problem Comparative risk assessment CRA is increasingly advanced as the means for setting realistic priorities RFF's Center for Risk Management commissioned background papers from leading experts on CRA for a meeting with federal regulatory officials Comparing Environmental Risks presents the revised papers of this workshop Representing the state of the art on programmatic CRA its methodological analyses and practical recommendations will be invaluable to government officials independent analysts and anyone studying environmental policy

Comparative Risk Assessment and Environmental Decision Making Igor Linkov, Abou Bakr Ramadan, 2006-03-02 Decision making in environmental projects is typically a complex and confusing process characterized by trade offs between socio political environmental and economic impacts Comparative Risk Assessment CRA is a methodology applied to facilitate decision making when various activities compete for limited resources CRA has become an increasingly accepted research tool and has helped to characterize environmental profiles and priorities on the regional and national level CRA may be considered as part of the more general but as yet quite academic field of multi criteria decision analysis MCDA Considerable research in the area of MCDA has made available methods for applying scientific decision theoretical approaches to multi criteria problems but its applications especially in environmental areas are still limited The papers show that the use of comparative risk assessment can provide the scientific basis for environmentally sound and cost efficient policies strategies and solutions to our environmental challenges

Scientific Review of the Proposed Risk Assessment Bulletin from the Office of Management and Budget National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Committee to Review the OMB Risk Assessment Bulletin, 2007-04-16 Risk assessments are often used by the federal government to estimate the risk the public may face from such things as exposure to a chemical or the potential failure of an engineered structure and they underlie many regulatory decisions Last January the White House Office of Management and Budget OMB issued a draft bulletin for all federal agencies which included a new definition of risk assessment and proposed standards aimed at improving federal risk assessments This National Research Council report written at the request of OMB evaluates the draft bulletin and supports its overall goals of improving the quality of risk assessments However the report concludes that the draft bulletin is fundamentally flawed from a scientific and technical standpoint and should be withdrawn Problems include an overly broad definition of risk assessment in conflict with long established concepts and practices and an overly narrow definition of adverse health effects one that considers only clinically apparent effects to be adverse ignoring other biological changes that could lead to health effects The report also criticizes the draft bulletin for focusing mainly on human health risk assessments

while neglecting assessments of technology and engineered structures
