Media Authorship Cynthia Chris, David A. Gerstner, 2013

Contemporary media authorship is frequently collaborative participatory non site specific or quite simply goes unrecognized. In this volume media and film scholars explore the theoretical debates around authorship intention and identity within the rapidly transforming and globalized culture industry of new media. Defining media broadly across a range of creative artifacts and production cultures from visual arts to videogames from textiles to television contributors consider authoring practices of artists designers do it yourselfers media professionals scholars and others. Specifically they ask: What constitutes media and authorship in a technologically converged globally conglomerated multiplatform environment for the production and distribution of content? What can we learn from cinematic and literary models of authorship and critiques of those models with regard to authorship not only in television and recorded music but also interactive media such as videogames and the Internet? How do we conceive of authorship through practices in which users generate content collaboratively or via appropriation? What institutional prerogatives and legal debates around intellectual property rights fair use and copyright bear on concepts of authorship in new media By addressing these issues Media Authorship demonstrates that the concept of authorship as formulated in literary and film studies is reinvigorated contested remade even reauthored by new practices in the digital media environment The Motion Picture Guide Jay Robert Nash, Stanley Ralph Ross, 1985
