Artificial Intelligence and Photography Stuart Oring, 2025-09-15 This book shows how artificial intelligence can be used as an effective medium in order to help the photographer create interesting and expressive photographs By using an Image Generator it is possible to create images that express ideas and concepts through written text This book shows many examples of photographs made in this manner It explains the strengths and weaknesses of this technology at the present time as well as some interesting possibilities that Artificial Intelligence opens up for the creative photographer Using this process I was able to create many different kinds of photographs including Documentary Photographs Surreal Photographs Multiple Exposure Photographs Fantasy Photographs Landscapes Abstract Photographs and Portraits etc The photographer works with the Image Generator in partnership He must carefully plan and visualize the photograph in order to communicate his visual ideas to a picture audience The next step is to carefully describe in writing his ideas and the Image Generator converts the written text to a visual image Then the image can be enhanced by the photographer by means of photoshop or an enhancement software that uses Artificial Intelligence in order to improve the quality of the image

Generative Adversarial Networks for Content Creation Hung-Yu Tseng, 2021 Content creation aims to make the information i.e. ideas, thoughts accessible to the audience through mediums such as posters, movies, advertisements or any type of art However it is a herculean task for people without years of professional experience to effectively convey the information In recent years visual content creation techniques based on generative adversarial networks (GANs) have made significant progress on facilitating the content creation process By learning from the data these approaches produce appealing content creation and editing results Nevertheless it remains challenging for the GAN based methods to 1) provide a controllable creation/editing process for the user and 2) learn from limited data for the content creation tasks In this thesis we investigate several solutions to address the above issues We first propose a multi-modal image-to-image translation framework that learns from the unpaired data We then leverage the image-to-image translation approaches to model the professional workflow of a particular content creation task We also design a differentiable retrieval scheme to gain the controllability of the conditional image synthesis model Finally we propose a regularization term to learn the GAN models under the limited training data

First of all we propose an Image-to-Image translation framework that can 1) produce one-to-many translation results and 2) learn from unpaired data across various image domains Specifically the model disentangles images into a domain-invariant content space and a domain-specific attribute space to enable one-to-many translation On the other hand a cross-cycle consistency loss function is used to train the model with unpaired data Furthermore we design a mode-seeking regularization term to increase the diversity of the generated images

Second we construct a system capable of modeling the progressive workflow for a particular type of artwork By leveraging a series of image-to-image translation networks to learn the progressive creation steps our model enables both multi-stage image generation and multi-stage editing of an existing piece of art Moreover we design an optimization process to address the reconstruction issue in the editing scenario

Third we develop a differentiable retrieval approach to select real image patches as the reference for the image synthesis task With our differentiable retrieval approach we can 1) make the entire pipeline retrieval and generation end-to-end trainable and 2) encourage the selection of mutually compatible patches for the same generated image Furthermore we design two auxiliary loss functions to facilitate the training of the retrieval function Finally we propose a regularization term to train the GAN models on limited data We theoretically and empirically show that our scheme 1) improves the generalization performance and stabilizes the learning dynamics of GAN models under limited training data and 2) complements the recent data augmentation solutions
