Partnering With Parents in Elementary School Math

Hilary Kreisberg, Matthew L. Beyranevand, 2021-02-15 How to build productive relationships in math education I wasn't taught this way I can't help my child These are common refrains from today's parents and guardians who are often overwhelmed, confused, worried, and frustrated about how to best support their children with what they see as the new math. The problem has been compounded by the shift to more distance learning in response to a global pandemic. Partnering With Parents in Elementary School Math provides educators with long overdue guidance on how to productively partner and communicate with families about their children's mathematics learning. It includes reproducible surveys, letters, and planning documents that can be used to improve the home-school relationship, which in turn helps students, parents, teachers, and education leaders alike. Readers will find guidance on how to understand and empathize with what fuels parents' anxieties and concerns, align as a school and set parents' expectations about what math instruction their children will experience, and how it will help them. Communicate clearly and productively with parents about their students' progress, strengths, and needs in math. Run informative and fun family events, support homework, coach parents to portray a productive disposition about math in front of their children. Educators, families, and students are best served when proactive, productive, and healthy relationships have been developed with each other and with the realities of today's math education. This guide shows how these relationships can be built.

Bringing online video into the classroom Jamie Keddie, 2014-05-07 Explores principles, techniques, and practical ideas for teaching English with video.

99 Tips for Creating Simple and Sustainable Educational Videos Karen Costa, 2020 The research is clear: online learning works best when faculty build regular, positive, and interactive relationships with students. A strategy that helps forge such a relationship is the use of videos. Student satisfaction and course engagement levels also increase with the use of instructor-generated videos, the subject of this book. Beginning by outlining the different types of videos you can create and what the research says about their effectiveness, Karen Costa explains how they can be designed to reinforce learning, align with and promote course outcomes, and to save you time across your courses. She then describes how to create successful videos with commonly available technologies such as your smartphone, and without a major investment of time, demonstrating the simple steps she took to develop her bank of videos and build her confidence to deliver short, straightforward learning aids that are effective and personal. Embedded QR codes in the text enable you to view sample videos and screencasts that bring the book's advice to life as you read. If you've been wanting to include videos in your teaching but haven't found the time or confidence this book will help you to develop a simple and sustainable video development process supporting both your success and the success of your students
