B. Norcliffe, Memorial University of Newfoundland. Institute of Social and Economic Research, 2005 In Global Game Local Arena geographer Glen Norcliffe explores how powerful forces of global economic integration have played out in Corner Brook and interprets the town's creation as a company town in the colonial era its slow transformation into a public municipality and the phase of vigorous restructuring launched in 1984 to raise the paper mill's performance in response to increased global competition. Restructuring introduced lean production and in turn this impacted on workers' families and on the larger community. Through extensive interviews with former and present mill workers and their families and by examining written records, newspaper accounts, legislative acts, earlier published sources, the author sheds valuable light on how the process of globalization has played out in one small but typical local arena. Since 1984, Corner Brook has experienced large-scale out-migration of younger adults and a rapid aging of the population. Community resistance to this process has been mostly subtle, taking the form of a reconnection to the population's local roots in outports and the woods.

Voices in the Kitchen

Meredith E. Abarca, 2006. Literally, chilaquiles are a breakfast I grew up eating: fried corn tortillas with tomato-chile sauce. Symbolically, they are the culinary metaphor for how working-class women speak with the seasoning of their food from the Introduction. Through the ages and across cultures, women have carved out a domain in which their cooking allowed them to express themselves, strengthen family relationships, and create a world of shared meanings with other women. In Voices in the Kitchen, Meredith E. Abarca features the voices of her mother and several other family members and friends seated at their kitchen tables to share the grassroots world view of these working-class Mexican and Mexican American women. In the kitchen, Abarca demonstrates women assert their own sazón (seasoning) not only in their cooking but also in their lives. Through a series of oral histories or charlas culinarias (culinary chats), the women interviewed address issues of space, sensual knowledge, artistic and narrative expression, and cultural and social change. From her mother's breakfast chilaquiles to the most elaborate traditional dinner, these women share their lives as they share their savory symbolic and theoretical meanings of food. The charlas culinarias represent spoken personal narratives, testimonial autobiography, and a form of culinary memoir, one created by the cooks as writers who speak from their kitchen space. Abarca then looks at writers as cooks to add an additional dimension to the understanding of women's power to define themselves. Voices in the Kitchen joins the extensive culinary research of the last decade in exploring the importance of the knowledge found in the practical, concrete, and temporal aspects of the ordinary practice of everyday cooking.

Theatre and Globalization Patrick Lonergan, 2009-01-15

WINNER OF THE 2008 THEATRE BOOK PRIZE. Globalization is transforming theatre everywhere. As writers seek to exploit new opportunities to produce their work internationally, audiences are seeing the world and the stage differently. And as national borders become more fluid, the barriers between economics and culture are also becoming weaker. In this groundbreaking study, Patrick Lonergan explores these developments, placing them in the context of the transformation of Ireland, the most globalized country in the world since the early 1990s. Drawing on archival material that has never before been published, this study sheds new light on the culture of Celtic Tiger Ireland, focusing on such writers as Brian Friel, Sean O'Casey, Marie Jones, Martin McDonagh, Marina Carr, and Conor McPherson. In doing so, it shows how globalization poses difficult questions for authors and audiences and reveals how we can begin to come to terms with these new developments.
