Dead Beat Lost Souls Lucky Stiffs And The Perverse Pleasures Of Obituaries:

The Dead Beat Marilyn Johnson, 2006-02-28 The New York Times comes each morning and never fails to deliver news of the important dead Every day is new every day is fraught with significance I arrange my cup of tea prop up my slippers Obituaries are history as it is happening Whose time am I living in Was he a success or a failure lucky or doomed older than I am or younger Did she know how to live I shake out the pages Tell me the secret of a good life Where else can you celebrate the life of the pharmacist who moonlighted as a spy the genius behind Sea Monkeys the school lunch lady who spent her evenings as a ballroom hostess No wonder so many readers skip the news and the sports and go directly to the obituary page The Dead Beat is the story of how these stories get told Enthralled by the fascinating lives that were marching out of this world Marilyn Johnson tumbled into the obits page to find out what made it so lively She sought out the best obits in the English language and chased the people who spent their lives writing about the dead Surveying the darkest corners of Internet chat rooms surviving a mass gathering of obituarists and making a pilgrimage to London to savor the most caustic and literate obits of all Marilyn Johnson leads us into the cult and culture behind the obituary page The result is a rare combination of scrapbook and compelling read a trip through recent history and the unusual lives we don't quite appreciate until they're gone
