Ea Path Between The Seas:

Beyond the Big Ditch Ashley Carse, 2014-10-24 A historical and ethnographic study of the conflict between global transportation and rural development as the two intersect at the Panama Canal In this innovative book Ashley Carse traces the water that flows into and out from the Panama Canal to explain how global shipping is entangled with Panama's cultural and physical landscapes By following container ships as they travel downstream along maritime routes and tracing rivers upstream across the populated watershed that feeds the canal he explores the politics of environmental management around a waterway that links faraway ports and markets to nearby farms forests cities and rural communities Carse draws on a wide range of ethnographic and archival material to show the social and ecological implications of transportation across Panama The Canal moves ships over an aquatic staircase of locks that demand an enormous amount of fresh water from the surrounding region Each passing ship drains 52 million gallons out to sea a volume comparable to the daily water use of half a million Panamanians Infrastructures like the Panama Canal Carse argues do not simply conquer nature they rework ecologies in ways that serve specific political and economic priorities Interweaving histories that range from the depopulation of the U S Canal Zone a century ago to road construction conflicts and water hyacinth invasions in canal waters the book illuminates the human and nonhuman actors that have come together at the margins of the famous trade route 2014 marks the 100th anniversary of the Panama Canal Beyond the Big Ditch calls us to consider how infrastructures are materially embedded in place producing environments with winners and losers

Seafloor Geomorphology as Benthic Habitat Peter Harris, Elaine Baker, 2011-11-21 The conservation of marine benthic biodiversity is a recognised goal of a number of national and international programs such as the United Nations Convention on Biodiversity CBD In order to attain this goal information is needed about the distribution of life in the ocean so that spatial conservation measures such as marine protected areas MPAs can be designed to maximise protection within boundaries of acceptable dimensions Ideally a map would be produced that showed the distribution of benthic biodiversity to enable the efficient design of MPAs The dilemma is that such maps do not exist for most areas and it is not possible at present to predict the spatial distribution of all marine life using the sparse biological information currently available Knowledge of the geomorphology and biogeography of the seafloor has improved markedly over the past 10 years Using multibeam sonar the benthic ecology of submarine features such as fjords sand banks coral reefs seamounts canyons mud volcanoes and spreading ridges has been revealed in unprecedented detail This book provides a synthesis of seabed geomorphology and benthic habitats based on the most recent up to date information Introductory chapters explain the drivers that underpin the need for benthic habitat maps including threats to ocean health the habitat mapping approach based on principles of biogeography and benthic ecology and seabed geomorphic classification schemes Case studies from around the world are then presented They represent a range of seabed features where detailed bathymetric maps have been combined with seabed video and sampling to yield an integrated picture of the benthic communities that are associated with different types of benthic habitat The final chapter examines critical knowledge gaps and future directions for benthic habitat mapping research Reviews and compares the different methodologies currently being used Includes global case studies Provides geological expertise into what has traditionally been a biological discipline

Effect of Salinity on the Optical Extinction of Sea Ice at 6328Å Hurley T. Davis, Richard H. Munis, 1973 An investigation is made into the determination of the relationship between the extinction coefficient and the salinity of sea ice A HeNe laser is used to propagate a beam of red light of wavelength 6328Å through a series of ice samples at 20C The optical extinction coefficients were calculated and plotted against the measured salinities The results of the experiment indicated an exponential relationship between extinction coefficient and salinity The relationship may be described by the equation  $y = 2.41 \times 10^{-1} \exp(1.19x)$  where y is the extinction coefficient and x is the salinity Author Chukchi Sea Planning Area, Oil and Gas Sale 193 and the Seismic Surveying Activities in the Chukchi Sea, 2007 The Connecticut School Journal, 1900
