Cultural Industries and the Environmental Crisis Kate Oakley, Mark Banks, 2020-09-14 This volume critiques the current model of the creative economy and considers alternative models that may point to greener, cleaner, more sustainable and socially just cultural and creative industries. Aimed at the nexus of cultural and environmental concerns, the book assesses the ways in which arts and cultural activities can help develop ideas of the good life beyond excessive and unsustainable material consumption and explores the complex interactions between cultural prosperity, place, and the quality and availability of employment, leisure, and the rights to self-expression. Adopting a deliberately wide and inclusive interdisciplinary and international perspective, contributors to this volume showcase current and future ways of doing creative economy ecologically otherwise and differently. In 11 chapters, the book outlines some of the most relevant arguments from among the growing literature that critically analyzes the current creative economy with a focus on issues of gentrification, inequality, and environment. This volume is timely as it emerges into a political and economic context that is seeking desperately to reboot the economy, re-establish business as usual, and to do so partly through significant investment and expansion in the creative economy. The book will be suitable for upper-level undergraduates and postgraduates studying a wide range of topics including cultural and creative industries, media and communications, cultural studies, cultural policy, human geography, environmental humanities, and environmental policy, and will be of further interest to arts professionals, creative economy researchers, and policymakers.
