Abstract

Integral Humanism (IH), propounded by great Indian philosopher Deendayal Upadhyaya, opposes the materialistic and collectivist policies economically, socially and spiritually. This type of philosophy must be understood as a concept as the enhancement of the value of the person as well as the common good of every social subject. This present paper assess the epistemological perspectives which form the basis of IH and the practical performance difficulties of the outlook in contemporary socio political landscapes. By developing theoretical proposition, it is established that, despite the fact IH encompasses a plurality of options to standard ideologies to the practice of which numerous difficulties arise due to the complications of the contemporary governance, various types of the economies, and cultural diversities. At the end of the study, conclusions followed by recommended solutions and added research directions for minimizing the gap between the theory and practice.

Keywords: Integral Humanism (IH), theoretical analysis, governance, spiritual integration, practical challenges, socio-political application

Introduction

The philosophy of this Intellectual path is known as Integral Humanism (herby IH) developed by Deendayal Upadhyaya in the background of the global war of ideals between Capitalism and Socialism during the 1960s. It provides a blend of spiritual, social, and economic characteristics of human life in unity creating a single and whole view. In line with Upadhyaya, the philosophy has been regarded as a philosophical goal of achieving human rights in other comprehensive dimensions than the mere availability of material fortunes for the individual as well as the society at the spiritual as well as moral level. It fosters compatibility of individual
