unions can be engaged      Employment Relations in the 21st Century Valeria Pulignano, Frank Hendrickx, 2019-11-07 It cannot be denied that in recent decades for many if not most people work has become unstable and insecure with serious risk and few benefits for workers As this reality spills over into political and social life it is crucial to interrogate the transformations affecting employment relations shape research agendas and influence the policies of national and international institutions This single volume brings together thirty nine scholars both academics and experienced industrial relations actors in the fields of employment relations and labour law in a forthright discussion of new approaches theories and methods aimed at ameliorating the world of work Focusing on why and how work is changing how collective actors deal with it and the future of work from different disciplinary angles and at an international level the contributors describe and analyse such issues and topics as the following new forms of social protection and representation differences in the power relations of workers and political dynamics balancing protection of workers dignity and promotion of productivity intersection of information technology and workplace regulation how the gig economy undermines legal protections role of professional and trade associations workplace conflict management lay judges in labour courts undeclared work in the informal sector of the labour market work incapacity and disability in coherence of the work related case law of the European Court of Justice and business restructurings Derived from a major conference held in Leuven in September 2018 the book offers an in depth understanding of the changing world of work its main transformations and the challenges posed to classical employment relations theories and methods as well as to labour law With its wide range of insights analysis and reflection this unique contribution to the study of industrial relations offers an authoritative reference guide to scholars policymakers trade unions and business associations human resources professionals and practitioners who need to deal with the future of work challenges      Decent Work in the Digital Age Tamás Gyulavári, Emanuele Menegatti, 2022-10-20 This book explores the legal and practical implications of the digital age for employment and industrial relations To that end the book analyses the problems arising from the digitalisation of work and the negative effects on working conditions in fields such as platform work robotisation discrimination data protection and freedom of speech It also looks at how to ensure decent working conditions for workers affected by digitalisation by investigating the minimum standards that should be ensured to mitigate negative effects and how these could be best guaranteed by legislation and collective bargaining The book presents a theoretical framework on the impact of automatisisation robotics and digitalisation on the very basic principles of individual and collective labour law The chapters provide an in depth analysis of new patterns of work prompted by digitalisation including classification of platform workers recognition of employment and social security rights competition law aspects of platform work remote tele work arrangements algorithmic decision making and remote surveillance data protection and privacy and social media in working environments The book is an important reference for academics and researchers social partners and policy makers with an interest in labour law and industrial relations      Transformations of

Work: Challenges for the Institutions and Social Actors Giuseppe Casale, Tiziano Treu, 2019-02-15 Market volatility and uncertainty have put welfare and social security policies back centre stage and point up the need for closer links with employment policy. The inability of existing income support systems to respond to the increasing fragmentation of people's working careers, the needs of people in difficulty and the spread of various forms of poverty calls for well coordinated and efficient responses. This volume highlights the best practices in the various regions of the world in the contexts of international and EU labour law, industrial relations and social security. Authoritative reports by leading scholars of labour law and social security originally presented at the twenty second World Congress of the International Society for Labour and Social Security Law ISLSSL held in Turin in September 2018 cover the following research themes in depth: informal workers, migrant workers, global trade and labour organization, productivity and well being at work, transnational collective agreements, new forms of social security and the role of the State and industrial relations. In its insistence that despite the radical changes in the world of work and business brought about by globalization and digital technologies the decisions of institutions and public and private actors can lead to a more coherent system of international economic and social governance, this timely volume shows the way forward. Practitioners, policymakers and scholars in the relevant fields will benefit immeasurably from its expert analyses and recommendations.

Europe Reforms Labour Markets Aart De Geus, Eric Thode, Christiane Weidenfeld, 2016-03-07 Focusing on the perspectives of policy makers, the book's purpose is to closely examine the factors that make for successful/unsuccessful labor market related policy reforms. The aim is to reveal the political aspects, namely the chances, challenges and impediments to designing labor market reforms and to establish the conditions under which successful labor market reforms can be advocated, adopted and implemented. The work includes exclusive interviews with twelve former European prime ministers about the labour market reforms they initiated in their respective countries: Wolfgang Schäuble, Anders Fogh Rasmussen, Andrzej Lech, François Fillon, Gerhard Schröder, Georgios Papandreu, Mario Monti, Jan Peter Balkenende, Jerzy Buzek, Iveta Radicová, Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, Tony Blair.

Industrial Relations John H.G. Crispo, 1966-12-15 Industrial relations, which in the past have focused almost entirely on union management relations, have recently been expanded to include such new areas of interest as manpower and poverty problems. At the University of Toronto a new Centre for Industrial Relations has been established, a research oriented institution whose primary objective is to further scholarly investigations into all phases of industrial relations. To launch the new Centre a conference was held with distinguished Canadian and international authorities invited to discuss the challenges and responses for Industrial Relations in the next decade from various points of view. This volume, based on the papers presented, will be a welcome contribution to knowledge in this challenging field. In Part I, 'An International Perspective', David A. Morse considers the conference's general theme in terms of its world wide ramifications. Part II, 'Collective Bargaining in an Age of Change', is devoted mainly to a discussion of the impact of industrial change on collective bargaining institutions and practices James R Bright begins with a reminder that there are two schools of thought about the effect of automation upon such variables as skill and wage differentials Then Frederick Harbison and Arnold R Weber assess the recent record of collective bargaining Professor Harbison provides a wide ranging analysis of the performance of the American collective bargaining system to date and Professor Weber describes the effect of technological change upon the respective power of union and management upon negotiating procedures and upon the substantive results of collective bargaining Harry W Arthurs explores the role of law in coping with change especially the technological variety The third part of the volume On the Frontier of Industrial Relations considers two of the many new industrial relations problems Wilbert E Moore discussing the individual in an organizational society asks for a reconsideration of the roles of institutional responses to the challenges posed by industrialization Finally there are two discussions devoted to one of the most pressing economic and social problems poverty The Honourable Maurice Sauv who as Canada s Minister of Forestry is in charge of the Agriculture Rehabilitation and Development Act discusses the earnest response of governments to the challenge of poverty Tom Cosgrove discussing the United States war on poverty reviews the dimensions of the challenge posed by poverty in the United States and outlines the federal legislative response to date These provocative contributions should be received with great interest by representatives of labour management and government as well as by those members of the public who are concerned with the problems of a growing industrial society Economic and Social Challenges in the 21st Century
