Canadian Military Intelligence David A. Charters, 2022-10-03 The most comprehensive history of Canadian military intelligence and its influence on key military operations Canadian intelligence has become increasingly central to the operations of the Canadian Armed Forces CAF Canadian Military Intelligence Operations and Evolution from the October Crisis to the War in Afghanistan is the first comprehensive history that examines the impact of tactical operational and strategic intelligence on the Canadian military Drawing upon a wide range of original documents and interviews with participants in specific operations author David A Charters provides an inside perspective on the development of military intelligence since the Second World War He shows how intelligence influenced key military operations from domestic internal security to peacekeeping efforts to high intensity air campaigns including the October Crisis of 1970 the Oka Crisis the Gulf War peacekeeping and enforcement operations in the Balkans and the war in Afghanistan He describes how decades of experience innovation and increasingly close cooperation with its Five Eyes and NATO allies allowed Canada's military intelligence to punch above its weight Its tactical effectiveness and ability to overcome challenges reshaped the outlook of military commanders and intelligence emerged from the margins to become a central feature of military and defense operations Canadian Military Intelligence offers lessons from the past and critical implications for future intelligence support with the creation of the Canadian Forces Intelligence Command This book will be essential to both intelligence history and military history readers and collections Military Review, 1996 Professional Journal of the United States Army, 1996 Chances for Peace Sean M. Maloney, John Llambias, 2002 From 1992 to 1995 the Canadian Army was at the very centre of the violent conflict that raged throughout the Balkans In this book Sean Maloney and John Llambias have brought together first hand accounts from Canadian soldiers involved in UN missions in Croatia and Bosnia These personal narratives taken from officers NCOs and enlisted men give us an intimate look into UN peacekeeping in the early 1990s and the effect it had on our soldiers Events such as the controversial Medak Pocket Operation and the disengagement of the Kiseljak Pocket are described in detail Page 4 of cover Campaigns for International Security Douglas Bland, Sean M. Maloney, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). School of Policy Studies, 2004 After more than ten years of effort by many states to control and redress conflicts in the Balkans Africa the Middle East and elsewhere Canadian political and military leaders are still struggling to adjust defence policies and to build armed forces relevant to the international security situation Canada faces today But the unending demand of what on the surface seem to be disparate operations and the absence of any overarching description of strategic reality confounds these efforts Policies drawn from theories appropriate to the cold war era and classic peacekeeping missions are out of step with the demands of the past ten years and the future and make it difficult to develop new ways of thinking about defence policy and force development to deal with the world we live in In Campaigns for International Stability the authors see a new pattern emerging from ten years of experience and seemingly different operations The post cold war era has been superceded by the stability campaign a continuous diplomatic and military endeavour by states in various types of coalitions to halt conflicts disarm belligerents and police lawless regions around the world to bring peace order and good government to international affairs Armed force and sometimes deadly force is the central and necessary component of this campaign but what type of force and what type of policies are appropriate to this new era The authors address this question in a discussion of defence policy and management in Canada since 1989 and their relation to the needs of the stability campaign They describe policy making in a Canadian context political and other domestic factors that shape Canada s military capabilities and the influence of the defence budgeting process on policy choices Finally the authors set out a new defence policy framework for rebuilding and transforming both policy and the Canadian Armed Forces over the next ten years to meet the challenges of the stability campaign
