Change Within Tradition Among Jewish Women In Libya:

Change within Tradition among Jewish Women in Libya Rachel Simon, 2015-09-14 In the first major study of women in an Arab country's Jewish community Rachel Simon examines the changing status of Jewish women in Libya from the second half of the nineteenth century until 1967 when most Jews left the country Simon shows how social economic and political changes in Libyan society as a whole affected its Jewish minority and analyzes the developments in women's social position family life work education and participation in public life Jews lived in Libya for more than two thousand years As a result of their isolation from other Jewish centers and their extended coexistence with Berber and Arab Muslims the Jews of Libya were strongly influenced by the manners customs regulations and beliefs of the Muslim majority The late nineteenth century witnessed a growing European cultural and economic penetration of Ottoman Libya which increased after the Italian occupation of Libya in 1911 Italian rule continued until a British Military Administration was established in 1942-43 Libya became independent in late 1951 The changing political regimes presented the Jewish minority with different models of social and cultural behavior These changes in the foci of inspiration and imitation had significant implications for the position of Jewish women as Jewish traditional society was exposed to modernizing and Westernizing influences Economic factors had a strong impact on the position of women Because of recurring economic crises in the late nineteenth century Jewish families became willing to allow women to work outside the home Some families also allowed their daughters to pursue vocational training and thus exposed them also to academic studies especially at schools operated by representatives of European Jewish organizations Although economic and educational opportunities for women increased the Jewish community as a whole remained traditional in its social structure worldview and approach to interpersonal relations The principles upon which the community operated did not change drastically and the male power structure did not alter in either the private or the public domain Thus the position of women changed little within these spheres despite the expansion of opportunities for women in education and economic life Change was slow evolutionary and within the framework of traditional society

The Jews of the Middle East and North Africa Reeva Spector Simon, 2019-09-20 Incorporating published and archival material this volume fills an important gap in the history of the Jewish experience during World War II describing how the war affected Jews living along the southern rim of the Mediterranean and the Levant from Morocco to Iran Surviving the Nazi slaughter did not mean that Jews living in the Middle East and North Africa were unaffected by the war there was constant anti-Semitic propaganda and general economic deprivation communities were bombed and Jews suffered because of the anti-Semitic Vichy regulations that left them unemployed homeless and subject to forced labor and deportation to labor camps Nevertheless they fought for the Allies and assisted the Americans and the British in the invasion of North Africa These men and women were community leaders and average people who despite their dire economic circumstances worked with the refugees attempting to escape the Nazis via North Africa Turkey or Iran and connected with international aid agencies
