

The end of the ice age

© NewScientist

A small change in sunshine triggered a chain of events that led to the whole world warming by about 3.5°C

~20,000 years ago

A Changes in Earth's orbit lead to an increase in northern summer sunshine, melting the edges of the huge ice sheets in the north. Massive quantities of fresh water flood into the Atlantic.

~19,000 years ago

B The fresh water slows the Atlantic conveyor current, plunging the far north into a cold spell. The southern hemisphere, however, warms because ocean heat is no longer being carried north.

~17,500 years ago

C These changes push the band of westerly winds south, warming Antarctica, melting sea ice and stirring up the Southern Ocean. Deep waters rise to the surface and release long-trapped carbon dioxide.

Changing World Of The Ice Age:

The Changing World of the Ice Age Reginald Aldworth Daly, 1963 The Changing World of the Ice Age R. A. Daly, Hafner Publishing Company, 1965 The Changing World of the Ice Age Reginald Aldworth Daly, 1935 Glacier Evolution in a Changing World Danilo Godone, 2017-10-04

Glaciers have always played an important role in human history and currently they are carefully observed as climate change sentinels. Glacier melt rate is increasing and its mass balance is continuously negative. This issue deserves accurate and in depth studies in order to adequately monitor its state. This circumstance in fact endangers the water supply affecting human settlements but also creating new environments allowing the colonization by pioneer communities and the formation of new landscapes. This book is subdivided into two main sections in order to deal with the two topics of worldwide research on glaciers and ecology in glacial environments. In the first one, Glaciers in the World, several reviews and studies are collected. It is an overview of glaciers, their state and research carried out in different continents and contexts. The second section, Glacial Ecosystems, focuses on the other hand on glacier environments and ecological researches.

Echinoderms are an ancient and diverse group of marine animals with a rich fossil record. They occur abundantly in all modern oceans and at all depths where they contribute importantly to patterns in biodiversity and to the structure and functioning of marine systems. It is therefore vital to understand how they will respond to a rapidly changing world.

Polar Icebreakers in a Changing World National Research Council, Transportation Research Board, Marine Board, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Polar Research Board, Committee on the Assessment of U.S. Coast Guard Polar Icebreaker Roles and Future Needs, 2007-03-14

The United States has enduring national and strategic interests in the polar regions including citizens living above the Arctic circle and three year round scientific stations in the Antarctic. Polar icebreaking ships are needed to access both regions. Over the past several decades the U.S. government has supported a fleet of four icebreakers: three multi mission U.S. Coast Guard ships the POLAR SEA, POLAR STAR and HEALY and the National Science Foundation's PALMER which is dedicated solely to scientific research. Today the POLAR STAR and the POLAR SEA are at the end of their service lives and a lack of funds and no plans for an extension of the program has put U.S. icebreaking capability at risk. This report concludes that the United States should continue to support its interests in the Arctic and Antarctic for multiple missions including maintaining leadership in polar science. The report recommends that the United States immediately program budget design and construct two new polar icebreakers to be operated by the U.S. Coast Guard. The POLAR SEA should remain mission capable and the POLAR STAR should remain available for reactivation until the new polar icebreakers enter service. The U.S. Coast Guard should be provided sufficient operations and maintenance budget to support an increased regular and influential presence in the Arctic with support from other agencies. The report also calls for a Presidential Decision Directive to clearly align agency responsibilities and budgetary authorities.
