A Study of Overhead Rate Behavior at a U.S. Air Force Base in the Context of A-76 Competitions Alan J. Laverson,2000 In an effort to generate funds for force modernization the Air Force is looking toward the private sector to gain efficiencies and save money To decide whether it can reduce costs by outsourcing an activity the Air Force develops a bid for comparison to those of potential private sector providers Current policy for estimating the overhead component of its bid is to multiply the direct labor costs of the activity by 12 percent 12 This policy is controversial because there is doubt as to its accuracy and because it has altered the outcome of a significant number of competitions This research analyzed overhead rate behavior on a U S Air Force base i e Travis AFB to 1 determine the accuracy of the 12 percent rule 2 develop an automated procedure to estimate overhead savings that will result from outsourcing a commercial activity and 3 identify policies that would increase overhead savings if a commercial activity is outsourced A brief summary of some of the most significant findings and policy implications is below Defense depot maintenance challenges facing DOD in managing working capital funds ,1997 This report discusses financial management and logistics management issues relating to the effectiveness and efficiency of the Department of Defense s DOD operations Specifically it will focus on the operations of DOD S working capital funds which collect and disburse over 65 billion annually and on DOD S management of the 13 billion depot maintenance program It is important to note that these areas fall within defense financial management and infrastructure activities 2 of the 24 areas we identified as high risk areas within the federal government These issues have significant impact on the efficiency and effectiveness of how DOD spends its operations and maintenance funds DOD has consistently experienced losses in the operations of various working capital funds including the depot maintenance activity group and has had to request additional funding to support their operations This issue has been an area of concern to this subcommittee and other congressional committees Congressional Record United States.
