Changing Human Reproduction Social Science Perspectives:

Changing Human Reproduction Meg Stacey, 1992-11-02 Despite the extensive debates about new reproductive technologies there is still little published research on the social and cultural implications of the new reproductive techniques Our understanding of how babies are conceived and what it means to be a parent or relative have become more complex The authors argue that the neglect of social research into new reproductive technologies has led to a failure to make the necessary provisions for their consequences The plight of the involuntary childless who having been helped to conceive find themselves with three four or more babies illustrates this point clearly

Feminist Cultural Studies of Science and Technology Maureen McNeil, 2008-01-15 Feminist Cultural Studies of Science and Technology challenges the assumption that science is simply what scientists do say or write it shows the multiple and dispersed makings of science and technology in everyday life and popular culture This first major guide and review of the new field of feminist cultural studies of science and technology provides readers with an accessible introduction to its theories and methods Documenting and analyzing the recent explosion of research which has appeared under the rubric of cultural studies of science and technology it examines the distinctive features of the cultural turn in science studies and traces the contribution feminist scholarship has made to this development Interrogating the theoretical and methodological features it evaluates the significance of this distinctive body of research in the context of concern about public attitudes to science and contentious debates about public understanding of and engagement with science

Genetic Explanations Sheldon Krinsky, Jeremy Gruber, 2013-02-26 No longer viewed by scientists as the cell's fixed master molecule DNA is a dynamic script that is ad libbed at each stage of development What our parents hand down to us is just the beginning Genetic Explanations urges us to replace our faith in genetic determinism with scientific knowledge about genetic plasticity and epigenetic inheritance

Embodied Progress, Problems of Conception Marit

Melhuus, 2012-08-15 The Biotechnology Act in Norway one of the most restrictive in Europe forbids egg donation and surrogacy and has rescinded the anonymity clause with respect to donor insemination Thus it limits people's choice as to how they can procreate within the boundaries of the nation state The author pursues this significant datum ethnographically and addresses the issues surrounding contemporary biopolitics in Norway This involves investigating such fundamental questions as the relation between individual and society meanings of kinship and relatedness the moral status of the embryo and the role of science religion and ethics in state policies Even though the book takes reproductive technologies as its focus it reveals much about vital processes that are central to contemporary Norwegian society
