J. Maurya,2016 Reflecting on the Future of Academic and Public Libraries Roger Burnett,2016-10-01 Academic and public libraries are much different today than they were even two decades back Academic as well as public libraries nowadays have to face constant change As libraries modernize they face an increasingly harsh budget environment as well as technological disruption in media scholarship and education The political social and technological environment is one of transformation and uncertainty College and university libraries are at the center of changes to the library system Academic libraries must serve groups of users with diverse information needs and research skills In addition to the structural challenges facing all libraries academic libraries must also confront a rapidly changing educational and publishing environment in which the value and cost of a university education is being questioned A higher demand for accountability means academic libraries must prove their value and the value of the university system The growing demand for publishing services suggests new roles and responsibilities for academic libraries in the near future Each institution requires a unique vision for creating an intellectual center for 21st century teaching learning and collaboration Moreover that vision must reflect the institution s own voice and ask what it means to support the creation of academic scholarship Libraries must now foster a positive ecology of relationships connectivity settings and tools layered together to foster discovery and learning within the context of a dynamic academic framework But today public libraries are at a turning point The way we access and consume information has changed dramatically in the 21st century and this presents major challenges and opportunities for public library systems across the world The advent of new technologies has changed some of our reading habits But our need for shared community centered spaces to find information and connect with others is unlikely to change any time soon To survive in the digital age and stay relevant public libraries need to be brave and innovative They must embrace both the physical and virtual Reflecting on the Future of Academic and Public Libraries gives an overview about leadership competences needed to succeed with deliberate large scale changes in libraries Challenges in Librarianship Nancy J. Becker,Elizabeth B. Pollicino,Dennis H. Holtschneider,2003 These contextual cases remind us that we think best when the issues before us evoke both passion and professionalism Here are vividly detailed everyday tensions of librarianship portrayed among human complexities and imaginable lives We become stronger not by crafting elegant solutions but by conducting focused contemplation and multifaceted talk Dr David Carr Associate Professor School of Information and Library Science University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Toxic Dynamics Russell Michalak,Trevor A.
