and statistics unwittingly limiting their ability to carry out research in the future This textbook provides a practical introduction to quantitative ecology for students and practitioners who have realised that they need this opportunity The text is addressed to readers who haven't used mathematics since school who were perhaps more confused than enlightened by their undergraduate lectures in statistics and who have never used a computer for much more than word processing and data entry From this starting point it slowly but surely instils an understanding of mathematics statistics and programming sufficient for initiating research in ecology The book's practical value is enhanced by extensive use of biological examples and the computer language R for graphics programming and data analysis

Key Features Provides a complete introduction to mathematics statistics and computing for ecologists Presents a wealth of ecological examples demonstrating the applied relevance of abstract mathematical concepts showing how a little technique can go a long way in answering interesting ecological questions Covers elementary topics including the rules of algebra logarithms geometry calculus descriptive statistics probability hypothesis testing and linear regression Explores more advanced topics including fractals non linear dynamical systems likelihood and Bayesian estimation generalised linear mixed and additive models and multivariate statistics R boxes provide step by step recipes for implementing the graphical and numerical techniques outlined in each section

How to be a Quantitative Ecologist provides a comprehensive introduction to mathematics statistics and computing and is the ideal textbook for late undergraduate and postgraduate courses in environmental biology With a book like this there is no excuse for people to be afraid of maths and to be ignorant of what it can do
