Intiaz Alam,2006 Building Diverse Communities Trevy Ann McDonald,Mark P. Orbe,T. Ford-Ahmed,2002 An examination of how various methodological approaches can promote a sense of community within and outside the academy It focuses on the strategies used then demonstrates how researchers can put the theory into practice It also highlights how community can be guided via public channels The Historian-filmmaker's Dilemma David Ludvigsson,2003 Screen,1995 Once Were Warriors Emiel Martens,2007 In 1990 unknown Maori author Alan Duff suddenly became both famous and notorious in New Zealand for his first novel Once Were Warriors The violent story of a poor urban Maori family aroused much controversy in New Zealand society and the Maori community in particular Many Maori commentators condemned the novel for its negative and allegedly racist portrayal of the indigenous Maori people accusing Duff for hanging out the dirty linen and blaming the victim Four years later the homonymous film by Maori director Lee Tamahori led to similar fame and controversy On the one hand critics strongly disapproved of the commercial indigenous film on social political and aesthetic grounds On the other hand however Once Were Warriors became the most successful motion picture in the history of New Zealand cinema grossing over 6 7 million NZ dollars in the national box office and reaching a large international audience Once Were Warriors was not just a novel or film but a powerful cultural representation which had a significant impact on New Zealand society In this richly illustrated book Emiel Martens examines the impact of Once Were Warriors in Aotearoa New Zealand by exploring the two cultural representations with a specific emphasis on the film and their aftermath in postcolonial New Zealand society Why did Once Were Warriors cause such a controversy within the Maori community Which were the underlying metaphors of the public debate on both the novel and the film in New Zealand society And what did the heated reception of Once Were Warriors say about the position and identity of the indigenous Maori people within modern New Zealand Bringing together a wide variety of popular and academic texts the author discusses these urgent questions in relation to timely New Zealand and wider postcolonial issues such as racial stereotypes cultural politics ethnic relations indigenous media and Maori identity As an interdisciplinary Cultural Studies endeavour this book is surprisingly accessible and will prove interesting reading for anyone who wishes to know more about cultural identity postcolonial representation and indigenous filmmaking in Aotearoa New Zealand Tuning in Ronald Wayne Rodman,2010 Television has been called the boob tube goof box and even a vast wasteland of American culture Yet for all its banality television is in many ways a mirror of culture and communicates messages within culture through the multiple channels of visual images language sound and music All of these channels contain their own unique coded messages to create the larger meaningful text of television As one of these sensory channels music contributes to meaning in television through its artistic language and through television viewers association of music with certain aspects of culture Music has always been an integral part of the American television even from its earliest days Like its parent medium of radio television broadcasts music to entertain viewers with live and video taped performances but music has also come to play a much larger role in television beyond its pleasurable performance aspects Music is used in narrative programs to evoke moods and identify characters and setting it is used to sell products through commercial jingles and most importantly music generally aids broadcast television in navigating through the continuous flow of daily programming This navigational aspect of television music is a distinctive feature and functions to transport the viewer through three spaces of TV the flow of the televisual apparatus with commercials newbreaks and promos the storyworld of each narrative program and the representational space between narrative and flow As Heard on TV is an examination and analysis of music in American television during the first fifty years of its history The book focuses on how music has functioned to serve as a navigator through the flow of television and contributing to structure narrative programs while also conveying meaning to its viewers by correlating with the images and sounds that it accompanies Drawing from precedents of the cinema and radio the book examines music in a number of classic television genres by positing a theory of functional musical spaces adapted from theories of Charles Morris Umberto Eco John Fiske and others

Bound to Bond Mark Rubinfield, 2001-08-30 Bound to Bond Gender Genre and the Hollywood Romantic Comedy looks at gender roles in a unique way by examining what the last thirty years of romantic comedy films have argued reflected and implied Mark Rubinfield contends that essentially we are what we see and by identifying four basic plots of the genre representing four basic love stories he studies the implications of filmic depictions of male female relationships Cultural changes that have transformed our society since 1970 are seen here as we see them on the silver screen and the author analyzes notable examples of the genre with a rigorous sociological perspective What he reveals may be surprising during the seventies and to an extent the early eighties the plot conventions of Hollywood romantic comedy seemed to challenge rather than reinforce existing gender stereotypes Later however during what should have been a more enlightened time the genre reversed course reverting to more traditional types for men and women alike
