Attachment in Adolescence: Reflections and New Angles Miri Scharf, Orfa Mayseless, 2007-10-05 In recent years the number of empirical studies examining attachment in adolescence has grown considerably with most focusing on individual difference in attachment security This volume goes a step further in extending knowledge and understanding The physical cognitive emotional and social changes that characterize adolescence invite a closer conceptual look at attachment processes and organization during this period The chapter authors leading researchers in attachment in adolescence address key topics in attachment process in adolescence These include issues such as the normative distancing from parents and the growing importance of peers the formation of varied attachment hierarchies the changing nature of attachment dynamics from issues of survival to issues of affect regulation siblings similarity in attachment representations individual differences in social information processes in adolescence and stability and change in attachment representations in a risk sample Together the chapters provide a compelling discussion of intriguing issues and broaden our understanding of attachment in adolescence and the basic tenets of attachment theory at large This is the 117th issue of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development Social Anxiety in Childhood: Bridging Developmental and Clinical Perspectives Heidi Gazelle, Kenneth H. Rubin, 2010-03-22 Social anxiety in childhood is the focus of research in three psychological research traditions developmental studies emphasizing dispositional constructs such as behavioral inhibition and its biological substrates development investigations emphasizing affective behavioral characteristics anxious solitude withdrawal and their parent child and peer relational precursors and moderators and clinical investigations of social anxiety disorder also known as social phobia emphasizing a variety of etiological factors diagnosis and treatment In this volume we review and identify gaps in extant evidence that permit or impeded researchers from the three traditions to translate their core definitional constructs in ways that would facilitate the use of one another's research Topics include Conceptual relations between anxiety disorder and fearful temperament Factors contributing to the emergence of anxiety among behaviorally inhibited children the role of attention Familial and temperamental risk factors for social anxiety disorder Anxious solitude withdrawal and anxiety disorders conceptualization co occurrence and peer processes parents peers and social withdrawal in childhood Intimately connected to this translation of constructs is a discussion of the conceptualization of core states anxiety wariness solitude and their manifestations across childhood as well as corresponding methodologies Extant research is analyzed from an integrative overarching framework of developmental psychopathology in which children's adjustment is conceptualized as multiply determined such that children who share certain risks may display diverse adjustment over time multifinality and children with diverse risks may develop shared adaptational difficulties over time equifinality Finally key themes for future integrative research are identified and implications for preventative and early intervention in childhood social anxiety are discussed This is the 127th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development The mission of New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development is to provide scientific and scholarly presentations on cutting edge issues and concepts in the field of child and adolescent development Each volume focuses on a specific new direction or research topic and is edited by an expert or experts on that topic What Can Parents Do? Margaret Kerr, Håkan Stattin, Rutger C. M. E. Engels, 2008-04-15 In recent years research on parenting has changed stance from one where parents shape child outcomes to an interactive perspective However this shift is only now transferring to adolescents with research exploring how the roles that adolescents and parents play in their interactions can lead to problem behaviour Part of the Hot Topics in Developmental Research series this book presents the new perspective Handbook of Adolescent Psychology, Volume 1 Richard M. Hanish, 2008-01-14 Social network analysis makes it possible to determine how large and dense children's peer networks are how central children are within their networks the various structural configurations that characterize social groups and which peers make up individual children's networks By centering the child within his or her social system it is possible to understand the socialization processes that draw children toward or away from particular peers as well as those who contribute to peer influence This volume demonstrates how social network analysis provides insights into the ways in which peer groups contribute to children's and adolescents development from gender and intergroup relations to aggression and bullying to academic achievement Together the chapters in this volume depict the complex nested and dynamic structure of peer groups and explain how social structure defines developmental processes This is the 118th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development Family Relations Issues and Challenges

Rafael N. Ramirez, 2008 This new book focuses on family relations which is a cross disciplinary field involving psychology sociology philosophy education and comparative cultural issues Parental Monitoring of Adolescents Vincent

Guilamo-Ramos, James Jaccard, Patricia Dittus, 2010 The close supervision of adolescents dramatically reduces the incidence of risky sexual behavior drug and alcohol use and other activities that could negatively affect one's health and well being Because of the strong correlation between parental monitoring and a child's welfare social workers psychologists child development specialists and other professionals who work with children now incorporate monitoring into their programs and practice A definitive resource providing the best research and techniques for productive supervision within the home this volume defines and develops the conceptual methodological and practical areas of parental monitoring and monitoring research locating the right balance of closeness and supervision while also remaining sensitive to ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds Assembled by leading experts on childrearing and healthy parent child communication Parental Monitoring of Adolescents identifies the conditions that best facilitate parental knowledge ideal interventions for high risk youth and the factors that either help or hinder the monitoring of an adolescent's world The volume also sets a course for future research establishing a new framework that evaluates the nature and approach of monitoring within the parent adolescent relationship and the particular social realities of everyday life Conventionality in Cognitive Development: How Children

Acquire Shared Representations in Language, Thought, and Action Mark A. Sabbagh, 2007-03-30 An important part of cognitive development is coming to think in culturally normative ways Children learn the right names for objects proper functions for tools appropriate ways to categorize and the rules for games In each of these cases what makes a given practice normative is not naturally given There is not necessarily any objectively better or worse way to do any of these things Instead what makes them correct is that people agree on how they should be done and each of these practices therefore has an important conventional basis The chapters in this volume highlight the fact that successful participation in practices of language cognition and play depends on children's ability to acquire representations that other members of their social worlds share Each of these domains poses problems of identifying normative standards and achieving coordination across agents This volume brings together scholars from diverse areas in cognitive development to consider the psychological mechanisms supporting the use and acquisition of conventional knowledge This is the 115th volume of the quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development Rethinking Positive Adolescent Female Sexual Development Lisa M. Diamond, 2006-07-18 This volume provides thoughtful and diverse perspectives on female adolescent sexuality These perspectives integrate biological cultural and interpersonal influences on adolescent girls' sexuality and highlight the importance of using multiple methods to investigate sexual ideation and experience Traditional portrayals cast adolescent females as sexual gatekeepers whose primary task is to fend off boys' sexual overtures and set aside their own sexual desires in order to reduce their risks for pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases Yet an increasing number of thoughtful and constructive critiques have challenged this perspective arguing for more sensitive in-depth multimethod investigations into the positive meanings of sexuality for adolescent girls that will allow us to conceptualize and ideally advocate for healthy sexual developmental trajectories Collectively authors of this volume take up this movement and chart exciting new directions for the next generation of developmental research on adolescent female sexuality This is the 112th volume of New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development a journal published quarterly by Jossey-Bass Mothers' and Fathers' Judgments about Young Girls' and Boys' Autonomy Dana Erhard-Weiss, 2006 Leaks in the Pipeline to Math, Science, and Technology Careers Janis E. Jacobs, Sandra D. Simpkins, 2005 Around the world the need for highly trained scientists and technicians remains high especially for positions that require employees to have a college degree and skills in math science and technology The pipeline into these jobs begins in high school but many leaks occur before young people reach the highly educated workforce needed to sustain leadership in science and technology Students drop out of the educational pipeline in science and technology at alarming rates at each educational transition beginning in high school but women and ethnic minority youth drop out at a faster rate Women and minorities are consistently underrepresented in science and engineering courses and majors They account for a small portion of the work force in high paying and more innovative jobs that require advanced degrees This schism between the skills necessary in our ever-changing economy and the skill set that most young adults acquire is troubling It leads us to ask the question that forms the basis for this issue Why are adolescents and young adults particularly women and minorities opting out of the math science and technology pipeline The volume addresses gender and ethnic differences in the math science and technology pipeline from multiple approaches including theoretical perspectives a review of the work in this field presentation of findings from four longitudinal studies and a discussion of research implications given the current educational and economic climate This is the 110th issue of the Jossey

Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development Respect and Disrespect: Cultural and Developmental Origins David W. Shwalb, Barbara J. Shwalb, 2006 How and when do respect and disrespect develop in childhood or adolescence Respect enables children and teenagers to value other people institutions traditions and themselves Disrespect is the agent that dissolves positive relationships and fosters hostile and cynical relationships Unfortunately parents educators children and adolescents in many societies note with alarm a growing problem of disrespect and a decline in respect for self and others Is this disturbing trend a worldwide problem To answer this question we must begin to study the developmental and cultural origins of respect and disrespect Five research teams report that respect and disrespect are influenced by experiences in the family school community and most importantly the broader cultural setting The chapters introduce a new topic area for mainstream developmental sciences that is relevant to the interests of scholars educators practitioners and policymakers Research on these cultures and American immigrant groups is represented in this issue Chinese Japanese American Vietnamese German Turkish Puerto Rican Thai Filipino Laotian Cambodian This is the 114th issue of New Directions for Child Adolescent Development a quarterly journal published by Jossey Bass Click here to view the entire list of titles from New Directions for Child Adolescent Development New Horizons in Developmental Theory and Research Lene Arnett Jensen, Reed W. Larson, 2005-10-04 This inaugural issue by the new editors in chief brings together a group of cutting edge developmental scholars who each report on promising new lines of theory and research within their specialty areas Their essays cover a selection of important topics including emotion regulation family socialization friendship self civic engagement media and culture In the succinct engaging essays all authors provide thought provoking views of the horizons in the field This is the 109th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development
