ABSTRACT

Noting that most educators would agree that whole language no longer looks the same, this book collects eight articles written by whole language advocates and practitioners from New Zealand, Australia, and the United States that focus on the changes, growth, and development that have occurred in whole language both in philosophy and practice. They emphasize that whole language continues to have an important place in the literacy education of children. After an introduction by the editors, articles in the book are: "Whole Language: Are We Critical Enough?" (Beck Bergloff, Jerry Harste, and Chris Leland); "This Is Literacy: Three Challenges for Teachers of Reading and Writing" (David Bloome); "Defining Whole Language in a Postmodern Age" (Lorraine Wilson); "Towards a Personal Theory of Whole Language: A Teacher-Researcher Writer Reflects" (Don Fox); "Teaching Factual Writing: Purpose and Structure" (David Wray and Maureen Lewis); "They Don't Teach Spelling Anymore--or Do They?" (Christine Bouffler); "Really? Writing in School: Generic Practice?" (Jo-Anne Reid); and "Whole Language and Its Critics: A New Zealand Perspective" (John Smith). (RS)

Changing Face Of Whole Language:

The Changing Face of Whole Language Jan Turbill,1997 Resources in Education ,2000 The Changing Face of Whole Language ,1998 There are some who will argue that whole language was a fad of the 1980s The articles in this volume form a response to this claim They demonstrate that whole language is alive and healthy albeit a little worse for wear from the effects of uninformed and often deliberately malicious naming or labelling and a lack of understanding of the changes and change processes that whole language philosophy and its related pedagogy have experienced over the years

The Changing Face of Whole Language Jan Turbill,1997 Changing Faces of Adult Literacy, Language and Numeracy Mary Hamilton,Yvonne Hillier,2006 Shows how creativity can be an approach to and an ethos for several aspects of school life and management This book examines organisation leadership approaches to teaching and learning curriculum design assessment for learning and more It is useful for those working in partnership with schools and also for those involved in school change The Changing Face of Testing and Assessment Donald L. Gunning,1996 This book will not tell you how to teach reading Teaching reading is in large measure a matter of making choices Should you use basal readers or children s books or both Should you teach children to read whole words or to sound out words letter by letter or both Should you have three reading groups or four or no groups There are no right answers to these questions The answers depend on your personal philosophy your interpretation of the research the level at which you are teaching the kinds of students you are teaching community preferences and the nature of your school or school district s reading program
