Changing Values And Tribal Societies:

Changing Values and Tribal Societies Ratish Srivastava, 1992 Value orientation refers to principles held by member of a society regarding fundamental problems which influence human behaviour The most basic problems found in all societies of all times are man's conception of nature of man's place in it of man's relation to man of man's conception of time and his conception of activity Solutions for these basic problems must be sought It is the content of these solutions that is termed as value orientation The book a comparative study of two different and important ethnic groups the Munda and the Oraon puts to test the assumption that culture is one of the sources of value orientation If members of two ethnic groups differ consistently in their responses to the same questions it is reasonable to assume that cultural differences are at work

Sustainable Livelihoods of Tribal Communities in Odisha, India Narayan Chandra Jana, Anuradha Banerjee, Prasanta Kumar Ghosh, 2022-12-08 In India indigenous tribal communities are the most backward sections of the society and they have been a matter of great concern for the Government More than 87 per cent of the country's tribal population is confined to 11 states among which Odisha has the largest number of tribal communities and Mayurbhanj district has the highest concentration of tribes Throughout the history of development tribal communities were trapped in a vicious circle of exploitation This led to social discontent and unrest resulting in extremist activities which can be prevented only by more meaningful development of the tribal areas This book is divided into 10 chapters each dealing with very crucial and relevant issues It will be useful for policy makers dealing with livelihood issues social exclusion and tribal development related projects
