College Choice In America:

College Choice in America Charles F. Manski, David A. Wise, 1983 The most crucial choice a high school graduate makes is whether to attend college or to go to work Here is the most sophisticated study of the complexities behind that decision Based on a unique data set of nearly 23 000 seniors from more than 1 300 high schools who were tracked over several years the book treats the following questions in detail Who goes to college Does low family income prevent some young people from enrolling or does scholarship aid offset financial need How important are scholastic aptitude scores high school class rank race and socioeconomic background in determining college applications and admissions Do test scores predict success in higher education Using the data from the National Longitudinal Study of the Class of 1972 the authors present a set of interrelated analyses of student and institutional behavior each focused on a particular aspect of the process of choosing and being chosen by a college Among their interesting findings most high school graduates would be admitted to some four year college of average quality were they to apply applicants do not necessarily prefer the highest quality school high school class rank and SAT scores are equally important in college admissions federal scholarship aid has had only a small effect on enrollments at four year colleges but a much stronger effect on attendance at two year colleges the attention paid to SAT scores in admissions is commensurate with the power of the scores in predicting persistence to a degree This clearly written book is an important source of information on a perpetually interesting topic

College Choice Priorities Between Foreign-born and US-born Black Students

Sarah Okorie, 2012 This study investigates the differences in college choice priorities between foreign born and US born Black students in order to explain the large presence of Black immigrants in the Black population at top universities relative to their proportion in the nation s Black college age population Ogbu s cultural ecological theory and Bourdieu s cultural capital concept guided this research in that foreign born students were expected to seek aspects of colleges that would enhance their cultural capital such as college rankings while US born students were expected to choose colleges based on more practical aspects of colleges such as low tuition because of these groups different historical contexts in America However there was no supporting evidence for our main hypotheses Instead mother s education number of college applications and income were found related to college choice Such findings suggest that for college choice immigrant status is not important Further research may switch focus to college admissions officers decisions Understanding International Students from Asia in American Universities Yingyi Ma,Martha A. Garcia-Murillo,2017-10-20 This book is about international students from Asia studying at American universities in the age of globalization It explores significant questions such as Why do they want to study in America How do they make their college choices To what extent do they integrate with domestic students and what are the barriers for intergroup friendship How do faculty and administrators at American institutions respond to changing campus and classroom dynamics with a growing student body from Asia Have we provided them with the skills they need to succeed professionally As they are preparing to become the educational managerial and entrepreneurial elites of the world do Asian international students plan to stay in the U S or return to their home country Asian students constitute over 70 percent of all international students Almost every major American university now faces unprecedented enrollment growth from Asian students However American universities rarely consider if they truly understand the experiences and needs of these students This book argues that American universities need to learn about their Asian international students to be able to learn from them It challenges the traditional framework that emphasizes adjustment and adaptation on the part of international students It argues for the urgency to shift from this framework to the one calling for proactive institutional efforts to bring about successful experiences of international students Fifty Years of College Choice Jillian L.
