

The Rev Charles Bell is a minister of The First Presbyterian Church in California, USA. Among the posts he has held is that of Assistant Pastor to the Church of Scotland in Edinburgh. This book is based on his doctoral dissertation at Aberdeen University in 1982.

SO RICH A SOIL
JOHN McLEOD CAMPBELL
ON CHRISTIAN ATONEMENT

George M. Tuttle

John McLeod Campbell, Scotland's great 19th century theologian, had his theology hammered out on the anvil of experience. As a young minister in Rrie, Dunbartonshire, he became aware of a strong 'Aquatic' strain in the religion of Scotland composed with an introspective lack of joy and assurance which he believed derived from the high Calvinism of his day, with its doctrine of a 'limited atonement', that Christ did not die for all but only for an elect number. Generations of Scots had been taught to 'examine themselves' for 'evidences' of election, producing an inward-looking, often pain-ridden, attitude which contrasted sharply with the joyful triumphant faith and assurance of the New Testament church.

In our own day theologians like Barth, Rahner, Moltmann, Jungel and von Balthasar have all seen how Western theology has too often operated with concepts of God which owe more to Aristotle and the Socras lawgiver than the New Testament.

McLeod Campbell discerned this, and made it his early concern to give his people 'a ground for rejoicing in God' by directing their minds away from themselves to the love of God the Father revealed in the whole life of Christ.

The Very Reverend Dr George Tuttle is ex-Minister of the United Church of Canada and Principal University of St Stephen's College at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada.
