Buying Into The Environment Experiences Opportunities And Potential For Ecoprocurement:

Buying into the Environment Christoph Erdmenger, 2017-09-08 Green purchasing or eco procurement by local and central governments has long been recommended in documents such as Agenda 21 to be a key although sometimes supplemental ingredient in the achievement of more environmentally responsible economies Certainly sustainable consumption cannot be considered a realistic goal without the full engagement of public authorities Many initiatives have been undertaken in OECD countries most successfully in Japan and Denmark where green public purchasing has been proven to be workable and highly effective while in other countries city municipalities have successfully pioneered the development of sophisticated public environmental purchasing policies However for the vast majority of countries and their major cities the potential for green public purchasing remains woefully untapped A key question is what would be the environmental impact if the majority of cities in Europe replicated the success stories of those leading the way Public procurement has after all been an important tool in achieving other public policy goals such as defence Why should it not be used as a tool to defend the environment The RELIEF project funded by the EU's City of Tomorrow and Cultural Heritage programme was established to answer exactly this question to define the true potential of eco procurement and to develop a strategy for change in Europe Buying into the Environment is the result of the research segment of the project which has now been completed A further stage to design a Europe wide action plan will follow in 2004 The book organised under the auspices of the International Council on Local Environmental Initiatives ICLEI analyses national approaches already tested and provides in depth surveys on the pioneer cities such as Hamburg Malmö and Zurich Serious attention is given to city specific hurdles which have been faced and overcome The most relevant product groups for eco procurement such as construction transport energy information technology furniture and food are also analysed Uniquely the book also provides calculations on the environmental benefits potentially achievable through greener purchasing Tools were developed and tested by the RELIEF researchers on the environmental assessment of products public buying power and on evaluations of market conditions in order to provide scenarios for the application of green purchasing at a European level The conclusions are that there is huge potential for both local and central governments to adapt their behaviour patterns and purchase in a more environmentally responsible way For example 18% of the EU's Kyoto Protocol commitment could be achieved if major cities in the European Union purchased green electricity The results are complemented by new ideas on how best to foster innovation in public contractual arrangements to encourage the development of products such as super energy efficient computers and fuel cells and how the legal system may require adaptation and reform The results presented in this book will provide an indispensable resource for municipalities governments researchers and business practitioners looking for answers on how public procurement can have a fundamental and manifestly positive effect on the environment

Strategies for Circular Economy and Cross-sectoral Exchanges for Sustainable Building Products Marco Migliore, Cinzia Talamo, Giancarlo Paganin, 2019-09-25 This book offers a valuable tool for understanding current efforts to promote the reuse and enhancement of pre consumer waste in the development of new products for the construction sector as well as the financial and regulatory tools being used to support this trend It explores the vast and complex topic of the circular economy from the perspective of strategies for the reuse recycling of waste and develops a number of key premises waste reuse recycling must be considered using a logic of cross sectorality recognizing the need to enhance the dialogue between different sectors pre consumer waste is particularly interesting for the recycling market because the construction sector can reduce its environmental impacts by enhancing its capacity to use secondary raw materials and by products from other sectors and lastly the manufacturing sector is currently experimenting with promising forms of reducing recycling pre consumer waste and is at the same time providing by products that can be used in other production chains As such the book offers a valuable asset for professionals who are interested in sustainability in construction and in the study of construction products however it will be equally useful for local decision makers tasked with implementing development policies and innovations in the industrial sector

The Future of Eco-labelling Frieder Rubik, Paolo Frankl, 2017-09-29 Eco labelling is one of the key tools used by policy makers in many parts of the world to encourage more sustainable production and consumption By providing environmental information on products and services eco labels address both business users and consumers and range from mandatory approaches such as required product declarations to voluntary approaches such as national eco labels Eco labels can play an important role in environmental policy They reward and promote environmentally superior goods and services and offer information on quality and performance with respect to issues such as health and energy consumption Eco labels fit well into a multi stakeholder policy framework as promulgated recently by the EU s integrated product policy IPP since the development of criteria for labels and the acceptance in the market requires the involvement of a wide range of different parties from government and business to consumers and environmental organisations However many eco labelling schemes have had troubled histories and questions have been raised about their effectiveness So are eco labels an effective tool to foster the development production sale and use of products and to provide consumers with good information about the environmental impacts of those products Is eco labelling useful to business as a marketing tool What factors contribute to the development of successful schemes More than ten years after its establishment can the EU Flower be considered a success Are national eco labels such as the German Blue Angel and the Norwegian White Swan more effective Should eco labels be harmonised Are eco labels achieving their original aim of fostering sustainable production and consumption For which product groups are ISO type I eco labels appropriate and inappropriate Are other labels such as mandatory ISO type II and ISO type III labels more effective in some cases Are eco labels focusing on the main environmental policy targets or just on low hanging fruit Are eco labels really linked to other tools of IPP The Future of Eco labelling provides answers to all of these questions Based on a major EU research exercise the book plots a course for policy makers to address some of the historic problems with eco labelling to learn what works and what doesn t and to move forward with schemes that can make a real difference to sustainable production and consumption The book analyses the conditions under which eco labelling schemes both mandatory and voluntary are or can become an efficient and effective tool to achieve given objectives assesses previous experiences with eco labels in different European countries and the relationship of these schemes with business strategies IPP and market conditions defines strategies aimed at linking eco labels with other IPP measures explores how eco labels can be used to encourage sustainable consumption patterns create green markets foster innovation and development of green products and services and implement multi stakeholder initiatives and sets out detailed recommendations for the future of eco labelling The book will be required reading for policy makers businesses involved with eco labelling schemes and researchers interested in the development of sustainable production and consumption and IPP worldwide The Green Multiplier L.
