Debatable Diversity Critical Dialogues On Change In American Universities:

Debatable Diversity Raymond V. Padilla, Miguel Montiel, 1998-03-12 In this timely and thought provoking book the authors engage each other and the reader in an ongoing dialogue questioning the purpose and role of the contemporary university as bureaucratic corporate and diversified Written as a series of conversations between the authors two Chicano scholars at a western university Debatable Diversity chronicles their own experiences as academic activists who struggled for decades to transform an American university system based more on entrepreneurship and the business model than on a dedication to the ideals set forth by a social awareness and support for civil rights that came out of the 1960s and early 1970s a time when hope and faith in social change permeated college campuses Instead as Padilla and Montiel reveal this commitment was never realized and the lack of responsiveness of most American universities to the realities of shifting demographics and cultural diversity is the rule rather than the exception Posing a challenge for all of those interested in transforming the university into a place that reflects the realities of the American cultural landscape including growing minority populations the challenge of maintaining a sense of humanity in the face of the information age socioeconomic and class inequality and the growing presence of minorities on campus Debatable Diversity challenges readers to reexamine the purposes goals and functions of the American university in light of the ongoing social transformation from modernity to postmodernity Not only do the authors offer an insider's look at the inner workings of academia but also of academic activism with the goal of renewal and reconfiguration of the contemporary multiversity

Achieving Against the Odds Esther Kingston-Mann, R. Timothy Sieber, 2001-05 High school was like a penance imposed for some unknown sin Everything I ever learned that was important was learned outside of school So I never thought to associate schools with learning Amy UMass Boston student Today's diverse and financially burdened students enter higher education eager to succeed at institutions originally designed for culturally homogenous and predominantly white middle class populations They are expected to learn from faculty trained primarily as researchers Unsurprisingly student dropout and faculty burnout rates are high leading some conservatives to demand that higher education purge itself of unqualified students and teachers But as Achieving Against the Odds demonstrates new and better solutions emerge once we assume that both faculty and students still possess a mutual potential for learning when they meet in the college classroom This collection drawing on the experiences of faculty at the University of Massachusetts Boston documents a complex and challenging process of pedagogical transformation The contributors come from a wide range of disciplines American studies anthropology Asian American studies English ESL history language political science psychology sociology and theology Like their students they bring a variety of backgrounds into the classroom as people of color women gays working class people and foreigners of one sort or another Together they have engaged in an exciting struggle to devise pedagogies which respond to the needs and life experiences of their students and to draw each of them into a dialogue with the content and methodology of their disciplines Courageously airing their own mistakes and weaknesses alongside their breakthroughs they illuminate for the reader a process of teaching transformation by which discipline trained scholars discover how to promote the learning of diverse students As one reads their essays one is struck by how much these faculty have benefited from the insights they have gleaned from colleagues as well as students Through argument and examples personal revelation and references as well as students Through argument and examples personal revelation and references to authority they draw the reader into their community This is a book to inspire and enlighten everyone interested in making higher education more truly democratic inclusive and intellectually challenging for today s students

Neglected Social Theorists of Color Corey Tillman,David R. Dickens,C.C. Herbison,2022-10-12 Neglected Social Theorists of Color Deconstructing the Margins provides a novel contribution to the ongoing debates concerning the canon in contemporary sociological theory In particular the editors argue that many scholars whose work may hold significant potential for contributions to contemporary debates in social theory go unrecognized Still others while not completely ignored have fallen victim to a cultural and political climate not receptive to their work Feminist scholars have been in the forefront of these debates arguing that many insightful social theorists have been marginalized because of their gender More recently studies of individual theorists of color have appeared but these have been limited to African American scholars such as W E B Du Bois In the present text the editors extend this approach to include a broad diversity of theorists of color including those of African American Afro Caribbean Latinx Asian Asian American and Native American backgrounds In addition the editors also include the work of authors who come from academic fields outside of sociology and others who are journalists activists or independent writers The work has a unique format where the authors of each chapter provide a theoretical analysis of their subject and a discussion of the contemporary significance of their work leading to a rich discussion of underappreciated sociological scholars

Anti-intellectualism in American Media Dane S. Claussen, 2004 In this book Dane S Claussen argues that the news media have fed vocationalism and self doubt in higher education and anti intellectualism throughout American culture Analyzing articles in popular national magazines since the G I Bill of 1944 Claussen finds that media have overwhelmingly portrayed college as a time and place for students to play sports date and marry drink and take drugs protest join fraternities and sororities go on vacations avoid the draft escape their parents and perhaps most of all network and find jobs in short do almost anything except research study write think or debate In the tradition of Richard Hofstadter s Pulitzer Prize winning Anti intellectualism in American Life and Allan Bloom s Closing of the American Mind Claussen illustrates the counterintuitive and underestimated nearly overlooked role of the news media in higher education and anti intellectualism

Diversity Leadership in Higher Education Adalberto Aguirre, Jr., Ruben O. Martinez, 2006 Promoting diversity as a core value among social groups is one of the major challenges faced by institutions of higher education in the United States By focusing on racial and ethnic minorities in higher education this monograph provides a view of diversity as a positive and dynamic social force in society that promotes its integration as a core value and process Diversity leadership challenges higher education to move beyond co optation strategies in which diversity is viewed as a descriptive and static organizational element to the adoption of transformational strategies in which diversity is viewed as a dynamic and positive process Through the promotion and development of diversity leadership institutional leadership is seen as building capacity to promote inclusive learning and workplace environments in colleges and universities As demographic shifts in US society create an ever expanding context in which the well being of the nation becomes increasingly linked to the social and cultural groups that have been systematically excluded from full participation in American society the need for positive cultural and structural changes that foster their inclusion in higher education becomes an important challenge to address This volume provides an overview of the context for diversity leadership roles and practices in higher education It argues for an alignment between institutions of higher education and the diverse populations they serve in this country This is volume 32 number 3 of the ASHE Higher Education Report a bi monthly journal published by Jossey Bass See our entire list of ASHE Higher Education Report titles for a wide variety of critical issues facing Higher Education today Annual Meeting Program American Educational Research Association,1998 Forthcoming
