Coping With Discrimination:

Coping with Discrimination and Prejudice Mary Bowman-Kruhm, Claudine G. Wirths, 1998 Examines the causes and effects of prejudice and discrimination and discusses how to confront and cope with them

Coping with Discrimination Julie Hunt Johnson, 2020 This research study seeks to examine several critical gaps in our understanding of coping with discrimination This research study was one of the first to examine developmental trends in coping with discrimination from high school to college African American college students n 66 Mage 21 20 reported that their coping with discrimination strategies have improved since high school including educating and advocating resisting and support seeking This study also examines the relationship between personal coping resources and coping with discrimination strategies Agency ethnic identity and self esteem emerged as significant predictors of coping with discrimination strategies This study investigated personal coping resources and coping with discrimination strategies in relation to a specific event of discrimination and was one of the first to empirically examine forgiveness as a process within the context of racism Results suggest that forgiving a single act of discrimination nested within a larger system of racism may present additional considerations for the process of forgiveness Practical implications for future research are discussed

Coping with Discrimination Gabrielle I. Edwards, 1991-08-01 Examines the historical patterns and results of prejudice and discrimination and their effects on such minorities as the homeless blacks women homosexuals and the handicapped

Workbook for Coping with Discrimination Gabrielle I. Edwards, 1987

Coping with Discrimination Joanie Marie Mitchell, 2015 This research utilized data from the National Survey of American Life NSAL to examine the effect of discrimination on health among various sub groups in the black population African American and Afro Caribbean women and men The stress process model was used to investigate whether anger inflicted by discrimination had a negative impact on mental and physical health In addition the stress process model was also used to investigate protective influence of various forms of coping in face of such an unfair treatment Results indicated that anger inflicted by discrimination was indeed harmful for one s health consistently across the gender and ethnic subgroups in the black population except for Afro Caribbean men In addition the most common forms of coping were not necessarily helpful in reducing the negative impacts of discrimination on health or promoting health directly The importance of more systematic and long term focused research on coping with discrimination to reduce the negative health effects of anger is discussed

Racism and Gay Men of Color Sulaimon Giwa, 2022-01-27 Sulaimon Giwa s aptly named Racism and Gay Men of Color arrives at a time when many of the sociocultural issues it raises have come to national attention Yet gay men of color in Canadian GLBT communities are still subject to racism and excluded both online and offline If a gay man of color is not the right color he is often the recipient of stereotypical racial epithets and denied sexual approbation within an erotic world where sexual desires are structured along the lines of race ethnicity age disability and class Giwa warns against the denial that underlies much of this monolithic racism and highlights the strategies used by gay men of color to counter racism in their communities and to lead strong effective lives This important book will inspire advocates and activists students and scholars and will become indispensable in university and college courses on sexuality and race studies The Relationship Between Racial Discrimination and Coping with Stress Mario V.
