

PROBLEM-FOCUSED COPING

Problem-focused coping refers to stress management strategies to deal with stress that involves directly confronting the source of stress to eliminate or decrease its impact.

DEFINITION

Lazarus and Folkman (1984) make a distinction between problem-focused and emotion-focused coping:

"a distinction that we believe is of overriding importance, namely, between coping that is directed at managing or altering the problem causing the distress and coping that is directed at regulating emotional response to the problem" (p. 150).

EXAMPLES

Identifying Sources of Stress:
Making a list of specific events that create stress will allow a person to take the next step and devise a solution.

Studying to Reduce Test Anxiety:
Committing to studying at least 90-minutes a day during the week prior to an upcoming exam will reduce test anxiety by becoming better prepared.
