Copper Country Explorer Field Guide No. 8 Michael Forgrave, 2016-05-04 While the Copper Empire flourished north of the Portage Valley the lands to the south continued to remain wild and remote largely untouched by the hand of man That would all change in 1897 with the discovery of one of the region's most productive lodes the Baltic Atop its copper rich bounty would rise the soaring rock houses and sprawling surface plants of a trio of mine the Baltic the Trimountain and the Champion By 1923 all three would fall under the control of an industrial conglomerate of a size and scope rivaling even the great C H itself the Copper Range Company The Copper Range Company had begun its life as a mere common carrier railroad joining Houghton with the major railroads to the south Within three short decades however the company had managed to expand its reach into every major industry of the region In short order it had taken control of virtually every mine town mill and railroad to be found within the wide borders of the southern range The Copper Range had become an empire in its own right controlling the fate of the southern range for the next half century Haunted Copper Country Lisa A. Shiel,2014-12-29 What lurks in the mysterious woods of Michigan s Keweenaw Peninsula With a history as deep and rich as the shadows in the forest the Keweenaw nicknamed the Copper Country boasts ample fodder for tales of tortured spirits and playful tricksters From ghosts of the copper mining industry to kissing specters Haunted Copper Country whisks you away on a whirlwind tour of this Upper Peninsula treasure A brief history of each location provides insight into the origins of the haunted tales many never before published and culled from the author s interviews with witnesses and ghost hunters Explore the spooky side of the Keweenaw if you dare Copper Country Rail George E. Anderson,Richard E. Taylor,2008 From the railroads beginnings in the early 1870s to the complex rail network of the 1900s the advance and decline of the copper industry in Michigan s Upper Peninsula was mirrored by the railroads that served it With the abandonment in 1976 of the Houghton tracks of the Soo Line formerly the Mineral Range Duluth South Shore and Atlantic Copper Country was once again without the railroad service that built it This book seeks to tell this rich story of Copper Country railroads through a collection of pictures from various archival sources including the authors personal collections the Houghton County Historical Society Keweenaw County Historical Society the Rudolf Maki collection the Chuck Pomazal collection the Michigan Technological University Van Pelt Library Archives and the National Park Service archives

Copper Country Streetcars William J. Sproule,2013-08-05 During the early 1900s copper mining was at its peak in the Copper Country of Michigans Upper Peninsula Numerous communities sprang up throughout the region but travel between towns was difficult as the roads were not paved and became impassable during the winter months when over 200 inches of snow would inundate the area The poor travel conditions and boom period in the Copper Country were instrumental factors that resulted in the construction of a streetcar line to serve the area Service began in 1900 and the network was extended several times over the next few years Ridership peaked in 1910 when over six million passengers rode the system however it declined in the 1920s as automobiles became more popular roads were improved and the copper boom subsided Service finally ended in 1932 It is a fascinating history that surprises many of todays residents that streetcars operated in the area

Memories of a Copper Country Childhood Julia Hubbard Adams,1975 Mine Towns Alison K. Hoagland,2010-04-20 During the nineteenth century the Keweenaw Peninsula of Northern Michigan was the site of America s first mineral land rush as companies hastened to profit from the region s vast copper deposits In order to lure workers to such a remote location and work long hours in dangerous conditions companies offered not just competitive wages but also helped provide the very infrastructure of town life in the form of affordable housing schools health care facilities and churches The first working class history of domestic life in Copper Country company towns during the boom years of 1890 to 1918 Alison K Hoagland sMine Townsinvestigates how the architecture of a company town revealed the paternal relationship that existed between company managers and workers a relationship that both parties turned to their own advantage The story of Joseph and Antonia Putrich immigrants from Croatia punctuates and illustrates the realities of life in a booming company town While company managers provided housing as a way to develop and control a stable workforce workers often rejected this domestic ideal and used homes as an economic resource taking in boarders to help generate further income Focusing on how the exchange between company managers and a largely immigrant workforce took the form of negotiation rather than a top down system Hoagland examines surviving buildings and uses Copper Country s built environment to map this remarkable connection between a company and its workers at the height of Michigan s largest land rush Notes on the Copper Country of Northern Michigan W.
